Labor Board Works to Settle Walkout on Waterfront.

San Francisco, July 13 (AP).—Action on a proposed general strike of union labor in San Francisco was postponed late today until tomorrow morning.

Creation of a strike committee of more than 700 members tonight was agreed upon by the unions of the city and arrangements were made for a meeting tomorrow to decide upon final action.

San Francisco, July 13 (AP).—Forebodings of violence and famine gripped strike beleaguered San Francisco today in the face of a general walkout of organized labor.

Hundreds began an exodus from San Francisco.

President Roosevelt's labor disputes board worked frantically in last-minute efforts to bring about arbitration of the strikes of 27,000 Pacific Coast longshoremen and maritime workers—the walkout which precipitated the onrushing trouble—but little progress was discernible.

The aspect of terror was thrust into the picture as Southern Pacific Railway officials reported Communists were heading for San Francisco from Seattle, bent on destroying all highway and railroad facilities.

Bridges Unguarded.

State officials to whom the report was given said they had no plans for guarding highway bridges because they were too large to be destroyed easily.

Surrounded on three sides by water, San Francisco itself, with a population of more than 600,000, stood in imminent danger of complete isolation if the fast spreading strikes extend to ferry transportation agencies. Already highways leading into the city from the south were blockaded by pickets determined to stop commercial activity.

The city had enough fresh meat, fruit and vegetables to last perhaps three days, and enough nonperishable food to withstand a siege of 20 to 30 days. Milk trucks were running and bakery wagons continued to operate, but there was no assurance as to how long this would continue.

Court Grants Right to Continue Features' Publication.

The suit of The Washington Post Publishing Co. against the Chicago Tribune and its syndicate company, involving the comics "Andy Gump," "Dick Tracy," "Gasoline Alley" and "Winnie Winkle" and certain other feature articles, was decided yesterday in favor of The Post by Judge Leahy of the Supreme Court of New York County. Under the decision the injunction obtained by The Post last summer will stand and the Tribune company and its syndicate will be compelled to continue to furnish these comics and articles to The Post.

The suit grew out of a contract entered into in February, 1932, between The Washington Post Co., the predecessor of The Washington Post Publishing Co., and the Tribune company by which the latter agreed to furnish these comics and features to The Post for five years.

In June, 1933, after the change in the ownership of The Post, the Tribune company sold the comics and features to the Washington Times Co., which publishes the Washington Herald. The Post applied in New York for a preliminary injunction requiring the Tribune company and its syndicate to continue to furnish the comics and features to The Post, and the injunction was granted. The case was carried by the Tribune company to the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, which decided that the contract was assignable and upheld the action of the lower court.

The case came up for trial before Judge Leahy in May and was taken under advisement. Judge Leahy held that the contract was assignable and that neither side had rescinded the original contract.

Cleveland, July 13 (U.P.).—Gunfire crackled through a crowd of demonstrators in a downtown poor relief station this afternoon, killing two persons and wounding three others in a bloody ten minutes.

No sooner had the riot subsided than minor disturbances broke out in four other relief stations scattered throughout the city. These were broken up without casualties, but all police were ordered to remain on duty until further orders. Seven persons were arrested.

Stone Is Hurt As Nats Trim Indians, 3 to 2

Suffers Injury to Ankle; Is Lost Indefinitely; Stewart Stars.

By Lewis F. Atchison,
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Cleveland, July 13.—Well prepared for a nice little scalping party at Washington's expense, the Cleveland Indians were chagrined to discover this afternoon that their scalpels were a trifle too blunt. The Nats won, 3-2, maintaining their hot race with the leading Yankees at the safe distance of 9½ games.

It was Friday the 13th, it rained and it was ladies' day. On top of that the Redskins outbatted their intended victims, 12-7, and yet Washington, and particularly Walter Stewart, managed to survive all of these evil influences to give the Griffith A. C. its first victory in the West.

But it is a mistake to say that all survived, for one, Jonathan Stone, was carried from the field in the third inning, the victim of his own negligence on his advance to second base, which resulted in a badly injured ankle that will keep him inactive for an indefinite period. Stone was enjoying himself immensely at the expense of Orval Hildebrand, having two hits in two attempts, when floored by the jinx.

After a superficial examination on the field had indicated that Stone's ankle was fractured, reports from the hospital, where X-rays were taken, put the extent of Stone's injury to severely torn ligaments.

Walter Stewart pitched magnificently, despite the 12 times somebody from the reservation rose up and popped one of his offerings beyond the infield. He was calm while the Indians were collecting, and in

Public Denied Benefits From NRA Price Cut

15 Pct. Discount for Benefit of Government Only, Officials Rule.

NRA ruled yesterday that the public is not entitled to the benefits of the 15 per cent reduction from posted prices which was authorized by President Roosevelt recently in connection with Government purchases.

This far-reaching ruling is in conflict with the interpretation given by President Roosevelt when he announced the order.

That order, issued at the White House June 29, permitted bidders to cut 15 per cent off their listed prices on Federal, State or municipal contracts. It provided that after bids were opened, each bidder quoting a price lower than his field price must immediately file a copy of his bid with the code authority or other agency with which he is required under NRA to file prices.

As President Roosevelt construed the order, this meant that the new Government price, when posted, would then become the listed price for everyone. The original purpose of the order was to break up the practice of identical bidding on public contracts which had grown up under the codes and to give the Government, which is normally a heavy quantity purchaser, the benefit of something like quantity discounts.

But, under the President's interpretation, the order appeared to be

Smoke Screen Car Perils Traffic in Silver Spring

A smoke screen laid down by the driver of a small automobile as he fled out Georgia avenue through Silver Spring, Md., in a police chase late yesterday afternoon was so heavy that citizens, believing the town was burning, swamped police and fire departments with calls.

The car, occupied by two colored men and believed to be stolen or carrying liquor, was sighted by Motorcycle Officer William Bricker, of District police, at Tuckerman street as it sped out Georgia avenue. He took up the chase and at Butternut street, about six blocks further on, the smoke screen was laid down.

Despite the blinding smoke, Bricker shoved his motorcycle along at 75 miles an hour, keeping the car in sight until he reached the District line, where Laurence Dixon, Montgomery County policeman, took up the chase.

Through the crowded business section of Silver Spring the two cars raced at breakneck speed as pedestrians dashed for cover and other vehicles pulled up to curbs.

Dixon kept up the chase to Clarksville, 20 miles from Silver Spring, and then reported to his headquarters that the smoke and the speed of the pursued car had thrown him off the trail.

Yacht Cup Aspirant Keeps Unbeaten Record

Newport, R. I., July 13 (AP).—Yankee, Boston aspirant for the defense of the America's Cup, skippered by Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, today preserved her record as the only candidate unbeaten by an eligible rival by gliding across the finish line 12 seconds ahead of Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow. Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, the third starter, trailed Yankee and Rainbow by about 7 minutes. The race was over a 30-mile course.

RFC Forces Lower B.&O. Loan Rates

New York Bankers Agree to Float Issue for 4½ Per Cent.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

The RFC claimed a victory in its first major effort to force down interest rates in line with President Roosevelt's recent announcement, when the agency revealed yesterday that New York bankers had agreed to float a $50,000,000 5-year 4½ per cent secured note issue for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at a gross cost of 4.70 per cent annually.

Before the RFC intervened in negotiations between the B. & O. and its bankers, as announced at the time by The Washington Post, the best offer the carrier had been able to get was a basis costing the carrier 5½ per cent annually. The difference between the original offer and the arrangement now consummated is eight-tenths of 1 per cent.

By its offer to finance the B. & O. at a net cost of 5 per cent annually, if the bankers did not offer better terms, the RFC not only succeeded in forcing down the interest rate, but succeeded in forcing bankers to reduce their commission in handling the issue.

Savings Over Million.

The savings for the Baltimore & Ohio will total approximately $275,000 annually for five years, or $1,375,000. Besides, there is a good prospect the Baltimore & Ohio will reduce its indebtedness to RFC by more than one-third.

The final agreement between the Baltimore & Ohio and Kuhn Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co., the railroad's bankers, included a pledge on the part of the RFC to take over any part of the $50,000,000 issue that the bankers fail to sell at 4.70 per cent gross cost basis.

Tossing a cushion under bankers handling financing for railroads will remain a major RFC policy until it has been demonstrated that the country's money markets are again willing to absorb such issues on the lowered interest basis, it was learned.

The agreement between the Baltimore & Ohio and its bankers was reached in New York at a conference attended by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the board of the RFC; George M. Shriver, senior vice president of the railroad, and George W. Bovenizer, acting for the bankers. The announcement was made in Mr. Jones' name.

The announcement explained that the B. & O. had pledged collateral with a market value of 170 per cent of the loan, comprising 232,000 shares (par value $11,600,000) first preferred stock of the Reading Company; 332,000 shares (par value $16,600,000) second preferred stock of the Reading; 566,000 shares (par value $28,300,000) common stock of the Reading Company, and $38,000,000 of refunding and general mortgage 6 per cent bonds of the Baltimore & Ohio.

2 Killed, 1 Shot In Marital Rift

Texan Slays Former Wife and Her Cousin, Then Turns Gun on Self.

Dallas, Tex., July 13 (AP).—Once described as the "most beautiful high school girl in Fort Worth," Mrs. Ermine Harris, 30, mother of four children, and her cousin, Miss Patricia Kidd, were dead tonight and Mrs. Harris' former husband, H. B. Harris, was lying near death in a hospital, charged with their murder.

Divorced from his wife March 5, Harris, police said, had made several futile attempts at reconciliation. Today he went to his former wife's home and after a bitter dispute over terms of a court order, which permitted him to visit his children only twice a week, he shot Mrs. Harris and her cousin, and turned his pistol upon himself, inflicting a chest wound which physicians said probably will prove fatal.

Three of the couple's children were in the house when the shooting occurred.

County officials filed two charges of murder against Harris, despite the fact he is not expected to live.

Oakie Pays $100 Fine As Intoxicated Driver

San Bernardino, Calif., July 13 (U.P.).—An indignant, red-faced young man, who finally convinced officers he was Jack Oakie, film comedian, was arrested here today and charged with reckless driving and intoxication. He was finally released after paying a $100 fine in police court.

According to the arresting officer, the driver was overtaken as his automobile zig-zagged down the highway leading from Big Bear Mountain resort. Taken to jail, he protested loudly against his incarceration, but was locked in a cell after intoxication tests had been pronounced "positive."

East Europe Peace Pact Plan Lauded

England Assures World "Selective Alliances" Are Avoided.

London, July 13 (AP).—Great Britain and Italy were revealed today as hearty well-wishers for the French-sponsored eastern European security pact, while assurance was given that Britain has entered no "selective alliance" with any power.

Both Britain and Italy, as nonparticipants, see in the security arrangement proposed by the French a major step toward peace in Europe, Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons.

The pact would be an instrument of guaranteeing equal rights on the basis of reciprocity, Sir John said, inferring that France recognized, as a result of Foreign Minister Louis Barthou's visit here, the justice of Germany's claim to equality among nations.

Britain favors return of Germany and the entry of Russia to the League of Nations, Sir John said in his speech, the first official and public discussion of European affairs since the Barthou visit.

The presence of the two nations is necessary, he declared, to the permanent peace of the continent.

The foreign secretary emphasized repeatedly that Britain had entered no obligations beyond the Locarno pact by which, in 1925, Germany, Italy, France, Belgium and Great Britain guaranteed the peace of western Europe.

Although Sir John did not specifically reply to opposition charges of "military conversations" with France, Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, followed with an absolute denial.

The conversations with Barthou, Sir John declared, resulted in a greater feeling of peace and security, and conditions will be greatly improved if the powers enter fully into the proposed eastern agreement.

Britain regards the eastern pact, the foreign secretary explained, as a peace move, not a war move, and as having no intent of "building up one group against another."

New Locarno Plan Called Cooperative

Paris, July 13 (AP).—Official circles tonight pictured France as regarding the "new Locarno" proposal as a cooperative effort in behalf of peace which Chancellor Hitler can not ignore.

Great Britain's whole-hearted support is counted on to put the proposal through. Foreign Minister Louis Barthou already has begun work on it, conferring with Polish Ambassador Chlapowski at length.

The agreement, which the French prefer to call "the pact of the north," has two high points.

First, France, by guaranteeing the pact, would be obliged to send troops to aid Germany if that country were attacked.

Second, France, if attacked, would be assured of Soviet Russia's vast military through a supplementary agreement.

In its simplest terms, the pact is a general pledge of mutual assistance against an aggressor, to be signed by Germany, Poland, Russia, Czechoslovakia and the three Baltic powers.

The French were rather pleasantly surprised at the quick approval of Premier Mussolini of Italy, having feared that there would be resentment of French leadership in that country.

1-Wheel Landing Of Plane Saves Five Passengers

A sensational one-wheel landing of a crowded cabin plane in an open field near Laurel, Md., late yesterday saved five passengers from serious injury after a wheel swung loose from the plane's undercarriage.

Pilot Charles F. Thompson, Baltimore plane owner, who has been making flights near Laurel for several days, landed his plane with such skill that the passengers were not aware of the danger.

From the ground a large crowd, including the pilot's wife, watched anxiously as Thompson maneuvered the plane to a safe landing from a height of 500 feet. The wheel became disengaged shortly after the take-off.

Some doubt existed last night as to whether the German government is satisfied with the State Department's reply to the protest against Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's denunciation of Adolf Hitler's recent "bloody purge" of the Nazi ranks.

Acting on his own initiative, Dr. Rudolf Leitner, in charge of the German Embassy during the absence of Ambassador Hans Luther, went to the State Department yesterday and protested against the re-

Process Tax Here to Stay, Says Wallace

Secretary Admits AAA Has Lost Popularity in Middle West.

By Robert C. Albright.

Processing taxes are "the heart of the Administration's farm relief program" and they are here to stay, at least until Congress finds a satisfactory substitute, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said yesterday.

And Congress isn't going to find a substitute, according to the Agriculture Secretary. He said the only alternatives are direct grants from the Treasury, Federal purchase of land to take it out of production, or foreign loans to build a market.

"I can't imagine Congress substituting any such plans for the processing tax," said the AAA chief, who admitted "processors of everything except tobacco are growing very restive under the taxes."

Meantime, a flow of farm benefit checks was directed in increasing volume into the corn belt, where Mr. Wallace conceded the AAA is not any too popular, due principally to the sparsity of Federal monetary aid poured into the territory.

Asked bluntly how he accounted for the Administration's fading popularity in the corn belt, as evidenced by the Literary Digest poll, Mr. Wallace said it was because the territory "has received little in the way of benefit payments."

"Naturally they don't feet any too good about it," said the Secretary. "But the economic situation was such that we just couldn't help them. Benefit payments into the corn belt are starting up now, and it ought to relieve the tension."

Prodded again about Administration corn belt unpopularity, Mr. Wallace laughed with reporters. He

Navy to Ask 19 Warships In Next Year

5,500 More Enlisted Men Also Wanted in Move to Treaty Strength.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Looking toward treaty strength by 1942, the Navy has adopted a plan calling for 5,500 more enlisted men and the laying down of 19 new ships in the fiscal year ending June 30 1936.

This "operating force" plan would give the Navy 88,000 men, as compared with 82,500 during the present year. The new ships would include 12 destroyers of 1,500 tons each, two heavy destroyers and five submarines.

A high Navy official said the building program is being pointed toward a future plan of laying down around 15 ships—regularly each year. This number will take care of obsolescence and provide necessary replacements even of battleships. The cost is estimated at around $95,000,000 a year.

Gradually, this goal is being approached. Thirty-two ships were started the past fiscal year and 24 will be laid down this year.

The program depends, of course, on what money Congress provides. Budget estimates of the cost of the 1934 program have not been prepared.

Officials figure that a submarine would cost at least $3,600,000, a heavy destroyer $3,775,000 and a light destroyer $3,400,000. On this basis the 19 new fighting craft would cost about $65,000,000.

Compared with the present manpower, which is said to be 81 per cent of "complement," an enlisted personnel of 88,000 would raise the strength to a little more than 86 per cent.

The plan is to keep battleships

Scores Search Wood for Lost Child, With Kidnaping Feared

Hartsdale, N. Y., July 13 (AP).—State troopers, Boy Scouts and volunteers, fearful that 21-month-old Bobby Connor had been kidnaped by a peddler, searched the wooded Westchester countryside today as the hunt spread for the curly-haired baby.

Department of Justice agents, headed by Frank Fay, were ordered to join in the search for the frail child, dressed in a pink sunsuit when he disappeared at 6 p. m. Thursday.

Al legal forces were mobilized in the hunt for an eccentric drug peddler, who mumbled about his lost chateaux in France as he was turned away from her door by the child's mother, Mrs. Charles H. Connor, a few hours before the baby vanished. The man, about 40, was last seen on Tarrytown road driving a small car toward Ardsley.

Authorities working on the case, without sleep for 16 hours, were investigating three theories:

1. That the blond baby was slain by a degenerate and buried in the woods surrounding his Hartsdale Manor home.

2. That Bobby was kidnaped and is being held for ransom, which might be paid by wealthy relatives.

3. That the child might have wandered into the woods and met with an accident.

The searchers, including many volunteers from fashionable New York City suburbs, found fresh hope that the child might be alive in the discovery of a long-lost cattle in the woods, near his home.

The red and green rat...e had been missing for four months. Its discovery led police to believe the child had previously gone to play in the woods.

World Hears Own Story of Storm Troopers' Mutiny.

Agent of Foreign Power Again Hit

Economic Boycotts Are Defied; Reich Held Self-Sufficient.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 13.—Adolf Hitler, with a touch of dramatic defiance, defended before the world tonight his ruthless course of action which he said cost 77 lives in Germany to suppress a revolt that would have killed tens of thousands.

A plot of Ernst Roehm, executed Storm Troop leader, he said, forced him to "act with the speed of lightning," in the early morning hours of June 30, when "mutineers" were shot summarily by firing squads.

"In this hour I was responsible for the fate of the German nation," Hitler declared.

This, he added, was his answer to the question as to why he did not "invoke an ordinary course of action."

Gave Orders to Shoot.

"I gave orders to shoot those who were mainly responsible for treachery. * * *

"I issued orders further that if any mutineers tried to resist arrest they were to be immediately shot down. The nation must know that its existence can not be endangered without punishment by anybody."

Despite his strictness on their former leaders, Hitler promised Storm Troopers that their Brown Shirts soon again would be "dominant" on the streets.

The chancellor spoke before a meeting of the all-Nazi Reichstag, called to hear the first accounting of the leader of the nation since Roehm and the others accused of plotting were killed.

Addresses Whole World.

But his voice went into microphones which carried it to every corner of the world, perhaps to the largest radio audience ever addressed, since ample precautions had been taken for the explanation-hungry German people to hear him.

Hitler pictured himself as weighed down with anxiety for his nation ever since he came to power in January, 1933, freely admitting that economic problems are giving him apprehension.

He threw in, too, a defiance to those who would shut Germany off commercially, declaring that if necessary "our inventors and our chemists" can find ways of making Germany "independent of imports of materials which we shall ourselves be in a position to create or substitute."

Hitler came out flatly in his speech in opposition to mixing the Reichswehr (regular army) with political organizations, such as the Storm Troopers, an objective, he said, of the plot which he accused Roehm and former Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher of hatching.

Places Dead at 77.

Von Schleicher, who was shot down with his wife "resisting arrest," was to have become vice chancellor, Hitler said, succeeding Franz von Papen, Conservative friend of President Paul von Hindenburg, who was under guard himself for a short time after the rebellion was suppressed.

Not the least interesting portion of Hitler's speech was that in which he stated that the number of dead in the revolt was 77.

No number had been given officially previously, but semiofficial statements had put it as much lower. Nineteen were high Storm Troop leaders, 31 lesser members of that organization, and the others scattered among civilians, and Schutz Staffel (special guard) members. Three of the latter were shot, he said, for mistreating persons taken into protective custody.

Thirteen of those killed were "resisting arrest," and three committed suicide, the chancellor asserted, indicating that 61 executions took place.

Details Plot.

The plot against his regime as detailed by Hitler was engineered by Roehm, who, "without informing me, took up relations through a corrupt middleman with Gen. Kurt von Schleicher (Hitler's predecessor in office).

"Von Schleicher was of the opinion that the present German regime was untenable and that defensive forces of the nation and all national societies must be brought in one hand, that the only man for this post could be Roehm, and that Vice Chancellor von Papen must be removed and that he, Von Schleicher must be put in his place."

Von Papen, somewhat of an enigma in the new order of things since the "second revolution," was not present in the Reichstag with other cabinet ministers as the Reichstag session opened virtually without ceremony at 8 p. m., and Hitler started speaking three minutes later, talking for an hour and 41 minutes.

In the latter portion of his speech Hitler struck out boldly in a statement which recalled his earlier charges that a "foreign power" had been involved in the revolt.

French Envoy Linked.

Apparently referring to a reported meeting of Roehm, Von Schleicher and the French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, in the home of an industrialist named Regendanb, he said:

"If three traitors in Germany agree to meet with a foreign statesman and carry out this meeting after removing domestic help and giving orders to keep the meeting secret, let such men be shot dead, even if it should be true that in a conference thus kept secret from me, there was talk only about the weather, or old coins, or similar things."

"I feel sorry," the chancellor said at one point, "for the wives and children of those who were shot, but I believe that the misfortune that came to them was only a small fraction of the misfortune that might have descended upon tens of thousands of German men and women."

In the course of his charges regarding Roehm and Von Schleicher, Hitler paid tribute to President von Hindenburg, of whom he spoke with the greatest respect throughout his discourse.

Praises Storm Troopers.

"I could never have considered putting the Reichswehr and a nationalistic organization under one management," he said, referring to the alleged plans, "for I always insisted that such fighting organizations were part of a political institution that had nothing to do with the army.

"Besides, the head of the army is the field marshal general, the Reichspresident. His person is untouchable for all of us."

The Storm Troopers, the beginning of whose July vacation was marked by the summary executions among their leaders, did not lack for a good word, however.

Confessing that on three occasions the Storm Troops had had leaders who cheated the rank and file, Hitler said:

"But I also had an opportunity three times to see that the moment when his actions were proved to be treason the traitor remained alone and was avoided by everybody.

"In a few weeks the Brown Shirts again will be dominant on the German streets and will show everybody that it is unmistakable as a fact that National Socialist Germany is all the stronger now that it has overcome great difficulty."

Reduce Ranks.

A hint, nevertheless, that there will not be so many Brown Shirts—the number had grown to 2,000,000 or more—had been given earlier in the speech when Hitler said that Roehm expanded the organization without his authority.

A high dramatic point was reached by the chancellor as he concluded what he promised would be—and what turned out to be—a "brutally frank" statement of his reasons for acting as he did.

"Just as I am ready before history to take the responsibility for the 24 hours in which I made the bitterest decision of my life," he said, "in which fate again taught me with every fiber in my body to love the German people and the German Reich, so let all Germans feel themselves responsible for the most valuable possession Germany can have—order within and peace without."

Hitler went to the Kroll Theater, where the Reichstag met, in an open car which moved along a thoroughly guarded street amid cheers of thousands of spectators shouting over heads of the assembled police and Schutz Staffel men, with a sprinkling of brown-shirted Storm Troopers.

Uniformed Audience.

Inside he faced an audience composed almost entirely of men in the uniforms of the Storm Troops and the Stahlhelm (steel helmet war veterans organization).

Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian prime minister, who assisted Hitler in his suppression of the revolt, rang a bell to bring the Reichstag to order and Hitler shouted "Deputies, men of the German Reichstag!"

From then on he spoke earnestly, sometimes shouting, sometimes growing calm and persuasive, often interrupted by applause.

"The Reichstag president, Goering, called you together today," he explained, "to afford me the possibility to explain to the people before this competent forum of the nation the events which may live in our history as a sad warning memory for all times."

Then he launched into his story, telling first of the troubles which beset the Reich before he came to power and the Nazi view that Hitler's ascendancy to the chancellory was not just "another government" but the beginning of a new era.

Revolt Propaganda.

He was nearly halfway through his speech before he got to the details of the revolt.

Contrary to his expressed orders, Hitler said, "and contrary to declarations given me by my former chief of staff, Ernst Roehm, the Storm Troops had been filled up to such an extent that their inner homogeneity was in danger.

"The relationship between the Nazi party and the S. A. (Storm Troops) began slowly to loosen. Efforts were under way to estrange the S. A. more and more from the mission I set for it."

The bearing of individual Storm Troop leaders became, he continued, "not only not national socialistic, but repulsive."

"I referred these facts to Roehm without his supplying the remedy," the chancellor said. "Soon reports came that S. A. leaders were propagating the idea of a new revolution.

"Roehm tried to represent them as merely cowardly attacks upon the S. A."

Explains Hesitation.

The chief of the troopers, Hitler declared, was guilty of many acts of sabotage which showed he was out of tune with the policies of national socialism.

"From the month of May onward," the speaker charged, "there could no longer be any doubt but that Roehm was occupied with very ambitious plans which in the event of their realization must have led to most serious consequences.

"If I hesitated it was because I could not reconcile myself to the thought that a relationship I had believed was built upon fidelity could be nothing but a lie."

He continued to hope that the Storm Troop movement and the Nazi party could be spared the disgrace of the sort of purge which eventually came about, Hitler said, but a plot arose "not only against the normal conceptions of healthy people, but against the security of the state."

Tells of Plot.

At this point Hitler detailed his charges against Roehm and Von Schleicher, and then came to the dramatic story of June 30.

Roehm, Hitler said, tried to realize his purposes by force.

"The contertion was spread that the Reichswehr was intending to dissolve the S. A.," he continued. "This was later augmented by the damnable lie that I had unfortunately also been won over to the plan."

Through collections of money from the Storm Troopers, Hitler charged, Roehm assembled millions of marks to carry out his plot.

Subleaders were told, he related, that the second revolution was "for the purpose of making it possible for me to act freely again."

"I importuned him of his own accord to oppose this madness," Hitler said of a five-hour conference he had with Roehm early in June, "and to lend the weight of his authority to prevent its development—that thus only a catastrophe could be ended.

"Roehm left the conference with assurance that he would see everything put in order.

Hitler Arrest Planned.

"Seeing that he could not win my support, he made preparations for my removal.

"The counter-revolution was to begin with an assault upon a government building and with my arrest. Orders were to be given to the Storm Troops in my name.

"By the end of June I was determined to put an end to this impossible development before the blood of tens of thousands of innocent persons had been spilled in this catastrophe."

At first, Hitler said, he intended to go to Bad Weisse, where Storm Troop leaders had been called for a conference at noon June 30, remove Roehm from office and arrest the sub-leaders.

Before the end of Friday, June 29, however, alarming news reached him and he abandoned a trip through a labor camp to be ready for an emergency.

He revealed that he had learned the Berlin Storm Troops had been called out for revolt at 4 p. m. June 30, and in Munich the alarm was for 9 p. m. June 29.

No Alternative.

"Under these conditions," he said, "there could be but one decision if misfortune is yet to be averted; I had to act with the speed of lightning.

"Only by interfering ruthlessly and with blood was it still possible to prevent the revolt from spreading out. There could be no question but that it was better to destroy a hundred mutineers and conspirators than to let tens of thousands of innocent S. A. men perish on one side and tens of thousands of equally innocent persons on the other."

Hitler then related the events of June 29, telling how he went to Bad Weisse and seized the rebels, having them shot, as previously had been told by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in a radio address.

"Mutinees," said the chancellor, "must be broken up according to laws which eternally remain equally high. If anybody confronts me with the charge of why I didn't invoke an ordinary course of action, I can only say:

Quelling of Revolt.

"In this hour I was responsible for the fate of the German nation and thereby the supreme court of the German people during these 24 hours consisted of myself.

"I gave orders to shoot those who were mainly responsible for treachery. I gave further orders to burn out unto the raw flesh the pestboil of our internal well-poisoning, and the poisoning of foreign countries.

"I issued orders further that if any mutineers tried to resist arrest they were to be immediately shot down. The nation must know that its existence can not be endangered without punishment by anybody, and everybody must know for all future times that if he raises his hand to strike at the state, certain death will be his fate.

"Every National Socialist must know that no rank and no position can take personal responsibility and therewith punishment from him.

"I have persecuted thousands of our former opponents on account of their corruption. I would blame myself very much if I now were to tolerate similar manifestations in our own midst."

Penalty for Treason.

The chancellor, his voice rising to oratorical heights, said that if he were confronted with the claim that due process of law should have been used to weigh the guilt of revolutionary leaders he would "enter a solemn protest against this point of view."

"Whoever practices treason must be punished not according to the extent of his deed, but according to his attitude as it reveals itself.

"It is not up to me to examine whether the lot of this or that mutiny instigator, destroyer or well-poisoner is too harsh as measured by German public opinion or in a wider sense, the public opinion of the world."

By July 1, Hitler insisted, normal conditions had been restored to Germany.

Stories that his own nerves had given away under the strain were branded as absurd, and certainly there was no sign of physical or mental strain as the chancellor spoke or as he acknowledged the greetings of the crowds on his way to the theater.

Admits Apprehension.

"We have not made a revolution as anarchists. But as executives we have removed the regime of a revolt.

"We did not conceive our task to be that of securing power through bayonets, but rather of deriving it from the hearts of our people—and there to anchor it.

"If today I read in foreign newspapers that I am filled at present with deep apprehension with economic worries, I can give but one answer—yes.

"But anxiety is not a thing that weighs me down only today. It has always weighed me down."

Then he went into a history of the rise and the policies of his regime, before coming to the story of the revolt.

"When after 15 years of struggle we finally obtained the leadership of the nation," he said, "this tormenting worry did not leave us, but, on the contrary, it took hold of us more powerfully.

Cites Chaos.

"You may believe me if I assure you that throughout my life I have never worried about my own fate.

"I confess that since the faith of the field marshal put me in my place I have been borne down by a load of worries which the present and future of our people places as a burden upon all of us.

"For on January 30, 1933, we did not take over a state that was politically in order and economically sound, but we took over political and economic chaos."

The German Reich, he assured his hearers, no longer is "a geographical conception, but a political unity."

"Just as in the interior organization of the Reich we have secured unity and thereby the future of the German people, we have undauntedly also presented the interests of our people toward foreign nations," he continued.

"I consider it a higher merit to have courage to find a way out of misery than to remain in misery from fear of going the wrong way.

Indorsed by People.

"The best proof of the correctness of this viewpoint is the attitude of the German people themselves. All classes of society have indorsed the new regime.

"When I entered the Wilhelmstrasse as chancellor of the Reich, the authority of the Reich had become a worthless phantom. The spirit of rebellion and opposition dominated in the state. This spirit we extinguished and removed within a few months.

"Whatever our opponents may criticize, they cannot deny that we did not capitulate to our problems, that we always tried bravely to solve them and in countless cases did solve them.

"Whoever wants to be just to us must measure our success by what would have happened had we not been victorious.

"If our trade balance becomes a passive one because of economic barriers raised in foreign markets or because of a political boycott, we shall, through our ability, and thanks to the ingeniousness of our inventors and chemists, find ways of making ourselves independent of imports of materials which we shall ourselves be in a position to create or substitute."

Still Opposition.

Paying tribute to the cooperation of the people, Hitler said that it was "the chief reason for our success."

The fight for Germany's reconstruction, he declared, spread from the old and trusted leaders of the Nazi movement to the newly converted millions of laborers in the nation, representing "the healthy element of our people."

On the other hand, Hitler continued, there is still opposition to be found in a small negative group which he described as follows:

"First of all, a small coterie of international apostles of political and economic communism. The overwhelming majority, especially of German workers already have learned to know these Jewish international benefactors of mankind.

"Second, those political leaders who recognize that with January 30, 1933, their future had to be considered as ended, but who can not reconcile themselves to the irrevocability of this fact.

Other Opponents.

"Third, those revoluntionaries, who, in 1918, became uprooted and who now want revolution for revolution's sake and as a permanent condition."

He said a revolution of deserters and mutineers had compelled the Nazis to separate themselves from the conceptions of the former group.

"There is no such condition as permanent revolution," he said, "or more than that, there is no beneficial development with the aid of periodically recurring revolt."

"Fourth, the small group who had time to do nothing and who feel themselves changed in their otherwise unimportant lives. They conceive their misgivings to be identical with the call of the nation."

From that point the chancellor pitched directly into his discussion of the Roehm revolt and the measures he took to suppress it.

Strength Taxed.

That the address of almost two hours taxed Hitler's strength was indicated by his attitude at the conclusion of the address, which the world regarded as the supreme test of his career as a ruler to date.

After returning to his seat in the ministerial row he sat stooping, with head bent forward in repose as if weak from exertion.

Even when Goering was enunciating the party's faith in the leader, the chancellor did not raise his head though Goering kept pointing at him.

Only when the cheering audience rose for the Hitler salute did he show signs of returning strength. After the salute, however, he immediately resumed his seat.

Later, while receiving congratulations from various members of the cabinet and other close associates, he showed signs of returning vigor.

Thanked by Reichstag.

Goering, whose numerous offices include that of president of the Reichstag, expressed thanks on behalf of that body for Hitler's actions against Roehm and the other mutineers.

"The Reichstag thanks the chancellor for his saving the nation from chaos and civil war," he said. "Foreign nations and the foreign press, believing the atrocity stories, might ask any German what is his standpoint toward the leader.

"They would receive the unanimous answer:

"'We all approve of what is done by our chancellor.'

"After all, loyalty is the basis of today's Germany. Everybody who shakes this foundation will hear the fate of the disloyal leaders who were shot."

Goering said he begged Roehm on his knees to be loyal, but the chief of the Storm Troopers only laughed.

"He evidently, even at that time, was minded to commit treason," he said. "The Fuehrer's (leader's) action against mutineers is bound to win over to his side the last German who still is off on the 'sidelines.'"

Johnson Slap At Nazi Purge Draws Protest

U. S. Is Not Expected to Reprimand Recovery Chief, However.

Secretary of State Hull in reply briefly called attention to the fact that Gen. Johnson was speaking as an individual and not for the State Department and regretted that the general's statements had been misconstrued as official. There was no apology, and so far as is known, no rebuke to Gen. Johnson. In fact, yesterday the general, asked about the matter at Omaha, stood by his guns.

Johnson Won't Apologize.

"I meant everything I said," he declared as quoted by the Associated Press. "I will not take anything back, and I do not expect to be called down by the State Department.

"Nothing has impressed me so much since the war as these events in Germany. To me they indicate that when people depart from constitutional rights they enter into uncertainty."

Thus the doughty general, who has cracked down on Henry Ford, consigned American old dealers to the lower regions, and even oratorically thumbed his nose at United States Senators, takes his stand at Waterloo against the bloody dictatorship of Hitler. Only last Tuesday, in the midst of reports that President Roosevelt was opposed to his present speaking tour, came word from the cruiser Houston telling him to use his own judgment.

Report to Berlin.

Secretary Hull declined yesterday to say whether he considered the incident closed. The German Embassy has cabled a report of the matter to Berlin and for the time being the affair is, so far as the Germans are concerned, still under consideration.

It is doubtful if this Government will undertake to use a switch on the general. No disposition to do so yesterday could be detected. Secretary Hull is scrupulous about observing the diplomatic proprieties, but the bald truth might as well be blurted out—nobody here is going to lose any sleep if Mr. Hitler's feelings are hurt by something Gen. Johnson said to an audience of farmers in a dirt-floored cattle show barn out in Iowa.

A few minutes after Dr. Leitner, a genial and popular diplomat who has served in Washington many years, called at the State Department, Secretary Hull issued the following:

"The German Charge d'Affaires called at the Department of State this morning and protested to the Secretary of State against the remarks reported to have been made by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in a speech on July 12, 1934, relative to recent events in Germany.

"The Secretary of State called the attention of Dr. Leitner to the published statement of Gen. Johnson which appeared in this morning's press to the effect that he 'was speaking as an individual and not for the State Department or for the Administration.' Mr. Hull confirmed the accuracy of this explanation and said it was to be regretted that the position in the Government occupied by the speaker made it possible for remarks uttered by him as an individual to be misconstrued as official."

Johnson's Attack.

The passage in Gen. Johnson's Waterloo speech which aroused the protest was as follows:

"A few days ago, in Germany, events occurred which shocked the world. I don't know how they may have affecte you, but they made me sick—not figuratively, but physically and very actively sick. The idea that adult responsible men can be taken from their homes—stood up against a wall—backs to the rifles—and shot to death—is beyond expression. I have seen something of that sort in Mexico during the Villa ravages and among semicivilized people or savages half-drunk on sotol and marajuana—but that such a thing should happen in a country of some supposed culture, passes comprehension."

He then went on to discuss the reaction of such an incident on the public's attitude toward NRA, namely, that it naturally is apt to cause persons to think that if any kind of power is seized there is no limit to its atpplication. He said this has made him realize why American newspaper publishers were fearful of losing constitutional rights to freedom of the press under the newspaper code.

The general's reference to the bloody career of Villa in Mexico provoked almost no stir at all at the Mexican Embassy. An account of his remarks was telegraphed to Mexico City, but at the embassy it was doubted if there would be any protest. The inclination there was to ignore the matter as a reference to events 20 years old and implying no reflection on the present government.

Protests from Germany have been quite frequent lately. Recently one was entered because of a "mock trial" of Nazism in New York. The State Department replied in effect that the Government could not control free speech by private citizens.

Such protests are the result of ancient diplomatic custom which grew up in the days when an Ambassador was considered the personal representative of his august majesty across the seas. Any intimation that such aguast majesty was not the embodiment of all that was wise and good caused immediate bristling of ambassadorial tail feathers. Among many American diplomats this practice is regarded as long since outworn. The United States has not made it a practice in recent years to protest remarks made about this country abroad. Foreign debtors have been free to shriek about "Uncle Shylock" on any or no provocation.

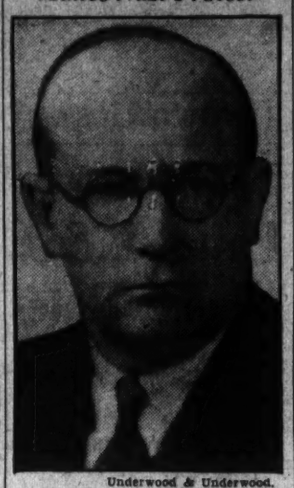
U. S. Attitude.

The attitude here, in a general way, is that if anyone wants to climb up on a soap box in Berlin or Paris and deliver himself of some uncomplimentary observations about the United States he is welcome to his audience. There is quick protest when the rights of an American citizen abroad are infringed, but this is regarded as entirely distinct from complaining when someone, even an official, hires a hall for himself and makes a speech.

The Italian government formerly was a frequent protester at the State Department. Remarks by Gen. Smedley D. Butler concerning Mussolini caused him to be reprimanded after Italian protests almost forced him before court-martial.

The German protest against Gen. Johnson comes within a few days after the House committee investigating Nazi propaganda in New York disclosed that Ivy Lee, an American public relations counsel, was receiving $25,000 a year from the German dye trust for supplying information and advice for the guidance of the German government.

Makes Nazi Protest



Underwood & Underwood.

DR. RUDOLPH LEITNER, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, yesterday protested Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's recent scathing verbal attack on Chancellor Hitler. The complaint was made to Secretary of State Hull.

Police Release Miss McKeever

Woman Believed Involved in Gang Activities Is Freed.

Mary McKeever, 34, of Philadelphia, arrested June 4 by Baltimore police after they had captured Robert Mais, 26, and William Davis, 48, in a gun battle, was released by Washington police yesterday.

Miss McKeever had been held here for questioning in connection with the activities of the notorious Tri-State Gang, wanted for hijackings and robberies, and suspected of at least one murder and a number of shootings.

According to police the pretty brunette and Mais were in the Upper Darby, Pa., apartment April 26, when Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, alleged sweetheart of William E. Phillips, shot to death by Policeman John A. Caton April 9 at Adams Mill road and Ontario place, was wounded severely by a bullet.

Police have identified Davis and Mais, named by Mrs. Fontaine, still in hiding here, as the man who shot her, as participants in a mail truck robbery at the Union Station here last autumn.

During her stay here Miss McKeever refused to talk to detectives. Davis, an escaped convict from Lorton, and Mais are wanted in Richmond for the murder of a bank truck driver this spring.

Holy Name Society Favors Film Drive

Objectionable Movies Are Scored as Menace.

Denouncing objectionable moving pictures as a menace to Catholic young men, the Washington Holy Name Society yesterday pledged its 15,000 members to support of the "Legion of Decency" campaign sponsored by the Sodality Union with 8,000 local members.

Action was decided upon at a meeting of the executive committee of the Washington section Thursday night in Immaculate Conception Hall.

A committee was appointed to draw up a resolution, indorsing the drive, which will be formally acted upon at the quarterly meeting of the local body on July 23.

at 85 per cent, along with aircraft carriers, cruisers, mine layers, and fleet aircraft.

"With personnel below 85 per cent of complement," one authority said, "many of the defensive and offensive weapons of these ships would be impaired. We consider 85 per cent the absolute danger mark. If they have to go below that, probably they will be tied up.

"The lighter forces, including destroyers and submarines, must be almost fully manned to be efficient, while many of the auxiliary vessels, such as repair, store, transport and hopital ships, operate constantly on a virtual war-time basis and must be even closer to full strength."

Among the actual fighting vessels, the only numerical increase in ships designed for operation in 1936 is the addition of one heavy cruiser to the 15 covered by the 1935 operating force plan. In destroyers and submarines a decrease is expected, with old ships retired in larger numbers than new ones are completed.

Rule Is Eased On Promotion In U. S. Service

McCarl Says Costs Can Be Charged Against Appropriation.

Probability of a break in the log jam of administrative promotions was seen in Government circles yesterday in a ruling by Comptroller General McCarl permitting the Public Printer to charge promotion costs against the regular Government Printing Office appropriation.

Running contrary to an order by Budget Director Douglas, which instructed all agencies to utilize savings made on personnel to absorb pay roll increases, McCarl told Public Printer August E. Geigengack that such was not the intention of Congress.

"It is not to be presumed," the comptroller's ruling stated, "that Congres intended that savings must first be used to absorb the 5 per cent increase in compensation before being available for appointments or administrative promotions."

Specifically, McCarl advised the Public Printer that he would be justified in using $24,574 for promotions on the basis of present salary commitments, and that the charge could be made against the regular Printing Office appropriation.

This was seen in some Governmental quarters as relieving promotion congestion generally by giving administrative officers more latitude in making advances in their staffs and as making possible promotions in those agencies where previously they could be made only from savings.

Should appropriations rrun low at the end of the fiscal year, it would be necessary for the agencies affected to go before the Budget Bureau to justify drawing against the indefinite appropriation voted by Congress to take care of wage increases.

Roosevelt Pays Visit to Cocos

Hawaii Trip Interrupted for Fishing at Old Pirate Isle.

Cocos Island, Pacific Ocean, July 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt, headed for the Hawaiian Islands aboard the cruiser Houston, paused today at uninhabited Cocos Island, an old pirate rendezvous, and immediately started to fish.

He left the cruiser in a launch, which set out over quiet water to find a likely fishing spot. The President's sons, Franklin and John, and Capt. Brown, the Executive's Naval aid, went along.

The President planned to remain here overnight. The layover led Naval officers and others in the Presidential party to consider a hunting expedition to the shore.

The date of the President's arrival at Hilo, Hawaii, today was set for July 25. He will arrive at Honolulu the next day for a two-day visit.

Powerful Bomb Find Prevents Paris Disaster

Paris, July 13 (AP).—Either the "three judges of hell" or a competing mober, struck a new note of terror today as a powerful infernal machine was found at the base of a lamp post. The bomb, which recalled the campaign of terrorism by "the three judges," contained 5 pounds of powerful explosive. Wires connected a battery to a cheap clock set to make contact. If the bomb had exploded, pieces of the lamp post would have been hurled in all directions.

The 25 cartridges in the infernal machine were described as equaling two .75 shells, famous during the war.

Workmen found the bomb as they opened the base of the lamp post to clean it.

There was nothing to connect the attempt with the terrorists, who mailed bombs to various French and American firms several weeks ago, accompanied by letters signed "the three judges of hell."

Slayer Whistles At Gas Execution

Nevada Syrian Dies for Murder of Dancer.

Carson City, Nev., July 13 (AP).—Joseph Behiter, 36-year-old slayer, who attempted to whistle a tune as he sat in the death chair, was executed in the State prison lethal gas chamber at sunrise today.

Behiter, a Syrian, came to Nevada from St. Louis, Mo., in 1931. He killed Maxine Armstrong, a Las Vegas dance hall girl, in the summer of that year.

Dr. James Hhom, prison physician, said Behiter apparently lost consciousness 30 seconds after the gas started to generate and "certainly" was unconscious in 1 minute and 20 seconds. Fifty-five witnesses watched the execution.

Father Cox Is Asked To Head U. S. Fascism

Rome, July 13 (AP).—Father James R. Cox, rector of the old St. Patrick's Church in Pittsburgh, and mayor of jobless "Shantytown" there, said today he has been offered a job as Fascist leader of the United States.

Father Cox, who is here guiding an annual pilgrimage to Rome, said Philadelphia leaders of Fascism, who claim organizations in seven States, had offered him the post.

Jail Escape Brings Felony Sentence

Conviction First in D. C. Under New Law.

To James H. Harley, colored, yesterday went the doubtful distinction of being the first person in the District to feel the weight of having committed a felony by escaping from jail.

He pleaded guilty before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District Supreme Court yesterday, and was sentenced to serve from one to two years, in addition to the remainder of the sentence which he sought to evade.

Harley has escaped twice from local institutions. After the second, he was indicted under the new law which makes it a felony to break jail. He will now have to serve the balance of a sentence of from two to five years, plus his more recent addition.

White Plague Deaths Gain In Washington

613 Tuberculosis Victims Here in 1933; Allen Inspects Camp.

While Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday made his first tour of the Tubercular Children's Summer Camp at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, and saw 150 boys and girls throwing off the first touches of the white plague in the fresh air and sunshine, the Census Bureau revealed that fatalities from tuberculosis in the District in 1933 had increased from 602 to 613.

Miss Olive Ward, superintendent of the camp, which really is a prevention against the active first stage of the disease, showed Allen the youngsters, all of whom probably will escape the disease in later life.

"This path to health is a beautiful sight," observed Allen, as he examined the spic and span equipment.

The Census Bureau's report showed tuberculosis to be the most dangerous disease in its class. A total of 854 deaths in Washington resulted from parasitic diseases, of which consumption is one.

Diseases of the circulatory system accounted for the greatest number of fatalities, with more than 2,000. Most of these were heart ailments.

Influenza deaths dropped from 72 to 46. Cancer killed 755 last year, as compared to 734 in 1932. Cerebral hemorrhages claimed 505 victims, as compared to 462 in 1932.

One hundred and sixty-nine persons committed suicide last year, as compared to 151 in 1932, and 124 were slain in 1933 against 114 the year before.

Automobile accident deaths decreased to 142 from 186.

D. C. Nurseries Open Full Time

Federal Relief Allotment Insures Operation to September 30.

Washington's ten nursery schools went back on a full-time schedule yesterday as the District was authorized to continue the project through September 30.

Authority to run a schedule of six hours daily for six days a week came with the agreement of Federal Emergency Relief officials to allot $8,000 a month to all emergency educational activities here.

The nursery schools have been operating half time for nearly two months and have been under a constant threat of a complete shutdown. Efforts of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, of the Board of Education, were important in securing the money to continue the project.

In addition to making the schools available six hours a day to the 300 children enrolled, the new program also will mean full-time work for the teachers, dieticians and nurses employed. The present arrangement will last until the end of September, when a new authorization will be needed.

Former Inspector Commits Suicide

Milton C. Clarke Worried Over Unemployment.

Milton C. Clarke, 63, former inspector for the District Engineering Department, committed suicide yesterday by poison and gas in the basement of his home at 2614 University Place northwest.

Clarke was found by his wife, Elizabeth, after she smelled gas. She called the family physician who pronounced the man dead. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. He said that Clarke had apparently been despondent over unemployment.

Flies Called on to End Poison Spider Menace

Ventura, Calif., July 13 (AP).—Dr. Rodney Cecil, of the Federal Bureau of Entomology, plans to fight the poisonous black widow spider with flies.

He announced today he had discovered at Ojai, near here, a cousin of the house fly which dotes on eating spider eggs. Dr. Cecil said he had sent a colony of flies to the University of California to be propagated to help exterminate the spider.

Japanese Flood Kills 70.

Tokyo, July 13 (AP).—Deaths numbering about 70 and damage of 20,000,000 yen (about $6,000,000) were indicated today by official reports from flood districts in the western prefectures of Ishikawa, Toyama and Niigata.

More Agents Sent West for Narcotic Drive.

Reinfrocements on Coast Necessary as Groups Change Bases.

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Government is sending reinforcements to the Pacific Coast to head off increased narcotic smuggling from the Far East.

This was disclosed yesterday by Commissioner H. J. Anslinger, of Narcotics, who has been directing the United States' drive against illicit drugs for four years.

European action to suppress international rings has scattered them from western and central Europe, Mr. Anslinger said, and many of them have gone to China to start new factories which turn out habit-forming drugs by the ton.

American agents already have seized quantities of heroin slipping in from the East. To clamp down on the smugglers, Mr. Anslinger has ordered some of his best men to the Coast with instructions to use utmost vigilance.

Increased appropriations have enabled the narcotics commissioner to build up his forces, but even so, hes aid, yesterday, "there is only a thin line of men stretched across the continent to cope with the illicit traffic."

There will be no weakening of the Eastern line of defense, Mr. Anslinger said, adding New York had been and probably always would be the main distribution point to supply the wants of the 100,000 and more American addicts.

Anslinger said his agents had been successful in keeping the smuggling of illegal drugs down to small lots in contrast to the big ship[illegible] borders in other years. The result has been, he said, to [illegible]st the price to the addict 10 and 15 fold and to increase the number of re[illegible] for cures by 100 per cent.

Singer and Song Writer Married

Jane E. Wilson, D. C. Radio Artist and Composer, Wed in N. Y.

Jesse Greer, New York song writer, and Jane E. Wilson, well-known Washington radio singer, were married in New York yesterday.

Green is 37; his wife, 24. They met in the studios of a broadcasting company, where she was singing on a network program.

Miss Wilson, who lived in Washington with her aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Danforth, 1430 Fairmont street northwest, attended George Washington University, where she graduated in 1932.

She went into radio after graduation. She was also widely known as a church and concert soloist.

Plasterers' Strike Near Settlement

Workers Have Been Out Since May 18.

The strike of union plasterers, out since May 18, may be settled within the next few days, Frank Murphy, secretary of the Employing Plasters Association, said at the conclusion of a conference with union officials yesterday.

John Rooney, a vice president of the international union, participated in the joint meeting. Heretofore negotiations have been conducted solely between wage committees of the plasterers' local and the employers' group.

About 175 plasterers, most of whom were employed on Federal building projects here, walked out when their demands for $1.75 an hour and a five-day, 30-hour week were rejected. Their expired agreement provided $1.50 and a 40-hour week.

Another meeting may be held today, Murphy said.

Man Is Held for Jury On Mann Act Charges

Charles Leo Wyland, 33, was held on bond of $15,000 for action of the grand jury yesterday following his arraignment on Mann act charges in Police Court.

Wyland was taken into custody after complaints had been made to District Attorney Whitestone by Ruth Comley that Wyland had brought her here from Baltimore for immoral purposes.

RFC Proposal Reduces B. & O. Loan Interest

New York Bankers Agree to Float Issue for 4½ Per Cent.

the stock which, in part, secures this issue, exceed the interest requirements on these notes," the announcement stated.

The bankers' charge, including their expenses incident to offering the issue, has been limited under the agreement to 1 per cent of the face value of the notes, which is regarded as a small commission. Under the original offer, the bankers' charge figured out at about 1⅛ per cent.

"By handling these notes on this basis," the Jones statement asserted, "the bankers are cooperating with the Administration in reducing interest rates."

The proceeds of the $50,000,000 issue will be utilized to pay at maturity $17,500,000 two-year, 6 per cent notes held by the public and due on August 10; payment of $25,500,000 which carries a 5 per cent interest rate due the RFC on the same date; payment of temporary bank loans aggregating $4,275,000, which is the railroad's entire indebtedness of this character, and for other corporate purposes.

The B. & O. originally applied to its bankers to float a $25,000,000 note issue with a three-year maturity. At the time it was planned to renew the RFC loan of $25,500,000. The bankers proposed to attach a 5 per cent interest rate to these notes, which with their charge and expenses would bring the financing cost to about 5½ per cent annually, Mr. Jones explained.

Negotiations Stopped.

The RFC, however, stepped into negotiations by announcing that it stood ready to lend the railroad $25,000,000 at a net cost of 5 per cent and to renew its existing loan on that basis. Mr. Jones said he would be happy if the bankers met this proposition, but that the cost of railroad financing should be held to a maximum of 5 per cent.

Since then the bankers and the railroad rearranged the original proposition. Instead of a $25,000,000 issue, it was agreed to double that amount and to extend the three-year maturity to five years. Instead of 5 per cent, the interest rate was set at 4½ per cent, and the margin for commissions and expenses was reduced by one-third, in exchange for the RFC assuming an underwriters' risk.

Under the original proposition, the B. & O. would have continued paying the RFC 5 per cent on the $25,000,000 loan renewed with that agency. Beginning August 10, the interest charge on that loan, absorbed by new financing, will be 4.70 per cent, or a saving of about $75,000 annually.

The $25,000,000 loan, at a cost of 5½ per cent, would have cost the B. & O. $200,000 annually more than it will under the new agreement. On the $17,500,000 debt now outstanding at 6 per cent, which will be refunded by the new loans, the B. & O. will save in the neighborhood of $250,000 a year.

Should the money markets absorb the whole issue, the RFC will receive payment of its $25,500,000 loan due August 10, thus reducing the B. & O.'s indebtedness to the Government from $72,096,000 to $46,596,000.

The agreement is subject to Interstate Commerce Commission approval, which will be asked within a few days.

Suit Answered By Cross-Claim

Rep. Abernethy Says Tako Park Hospital Tries Intimidation.

New Bern, N. C., July 13 (AP).—Answering a suit of the Washington Sanitarium, Inc., for collection of an alleged debt of $1,415.20, Representative C. L. Abernathy, Mrs. Abernathy and C. L. Abernathy, jr., have filed in Superior Court here counter claim of $35,000 and costs against the hospital charging malicious and wanton and wilful abuse of the process of the court."

The counter claim advances the contention that the sanitarium's suit which was filed here May 19, was part of a wrongful scheme to intimidate the defendants into paying an excessive bill.

It alleges it also had the purpose of injuring Representative Abernathy's reputation and thereby led to his defeat for another term in Congress.

Offivials of the Washington Sanitarium, in Takoma Park, Md., refused to comment on the suit of Representative Abernathy for $35,000 last night.

"We haven't been notified," said an officer of the institution, "until word reaches us through legal channels, we have nothing to say."

C. C. Morgan Plans For Charity Drive

Special Gifts Unit Teams to Be Formed Soon.

A study of the personnel of the special gifts unit of former years, with a view to early organization of the teams that will work under his leadership, is being conducted by Charles Carroll Morgan, recently appointed chairman of this group, which operates under the Community Chest.

Morgan has been identified with the Community Chest since the first campaign in 1929, when he served as a member of the unit of which he is now chairman. He has taken part in all six campaigns, both as a member and team captain. He also is a member of the board of managers of the Associated Charities.

Retiring Minister Given Gold Purse

Rev. Lawrence B. Rice to Leave Potomac Heights.

A purse of gold was given to the Rev. Lawrence B. Rice, retiring pastor of the Potomac Heights Community Church, by his parishioners at a farewell reception tendered him last night. Mr. Rice resigned after serving four years at the church while studying at American University, where he won a scholarship to the Drew Seminary at East Orange, N. J.

The reception was in charge of a committee composed of Mrs. Edward Doig, chairman; Mrs. W. Craigue and Mrs. Fred Thring. A musical program was given under direction of Dr. O. J. Randall. Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Randall, Miss Ruth Brown and Harry Guinn took part in the program.

Wallace Says Process Tax Likely to Stay

Secretary Admits AAA Has Lost Popularity in Middle West.

shot back defensively that this Western area is normally Republican, going pro-Democratic "only when the pain is too great."

"On my trip, I found the Administration a little more popular out there than I anticipated," he countered.

He was asked if a "revulsion" had not set in pretty generally against "farm regimentation."

"Some California people want more regimentation instead of less," the Secretary parried, "more perhaps than we would like to give them."

Wallace, who frequently referred inquiries to Farm Administrator Chester Davis, who sat in the press conference, said there was considerable "restiveness" against processing taxes among the packers and millers, but there had been no protests from the tobacco industry.

$358,993,104 Paid Out.

Agricultural Department records disclosed some $359,589,313 has been collected to date from processing taxes on such commodities as wheat, corn, cotton, hogs, sugar and tobacco, while about $358,993,104 has been paid out. Of this amount, about $281,427,941 was paid to farmers in benefits and rentals, and $80,000,000 was spent to remove surpluses.

Since the drought gripped the West, $2,750,000 has been paid to cattle farmers in 14 Western States, the AAA reported. Altogether 880,000 cattle have been purchased since June and turned over to the FERA to be slaughtered, processed and used to feed needy people. Benefit payments in the drought area since June have been $898,859, and purchase payments, $1,658,201.

Gloomy reports from the drought area continued to pour into the AAA yesterday, but experts of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics insisted the National food supply has not been significantly reduced, although bread grains, milk, butter and cheese production have been seriously hit.

Cattle Deaths to Go On.

"The principal effect of the drought is in a reduction of feed and forage for live stock," read a statement by the bureau. "Local shortages of certain food crops will be met by shipments from surplus producing areas."

Heavy slaughter of cattle in the drought area probably will continue for six months, with a curtailment setting in the first of next year, officials said.

"Despite recent rains over most of the drought area, the losses of early crops and pastures can not be recovered fully," their statement read.

Secretary Wallace's insistence that processing taxes "can not be safely abandoned by Congress" came in the face of strong intimations that the AAA may relax grain planting restrictions within the month.

Wheat Surplus Dropping.

Although the 15 per cent curtailment in wheat land in force last year has been continued, indications are it may be relaxed before August.

"It looks like we are headed toward a normal wheat carry-over next year," Wallace said yesterday, disparaging reports that the United States might have to import wheat. He said some might be exported instead.

Officials estimated some 124,000,000 bushels may be carried over from this year to next, well above predepression carry-over averages.

Woman Believed Spy Ousted by Switzerland

Berene, Switezrland, July 13 (AP). A German woman, Hildegard Rietmueller, was expelled from Switzerland today on a charge of "political spying."

Police said she had been making investigations into the activities of German refugees and others suspected of political offenses by Germany.

Removal of All Trolleys, Use Of Buses Urged

Elimination of Tracks on Wisconsin Avenue Is Asked by Attorney.

Elimination of street car tracks on Wisconsin avenue north of Massachusetts avenue was asked yesterday by Chauncey P. Carter, Washington attorney.

In a letter to the Public Utilities Commission, Mr. Carter suggested that buses be substituted for street cars in the rerouting program now in progress at the commission.

Mr. Carter did not limit his suggestion to Wisconsin avenue, but declared that he wished the commission would adopt a 5, 10 or 15 year program of getting rid of all street cars in the District, substituting buses.

"Aside from the noise occasioned by these street cars and the prejudicial effect on property," the attorney said about the Wisconsin avenue line, "the existence of this street car line is a serious hindrance and menace to vehicle and pedestrian traffic, particularly the former.

"With vehicle parking permitted on both sides of this thoroughfare and with double street car tracks, center poles and loading zones, there is only one clear northbound lane and one clear southbound lane for vehicle traffic. This makes for daily congestion and results in many accidents, particularly during rush hours."

Mr. Carter said that he believes the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, American Automobile Association and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission would agree to his suggestion. He declared that he could secure the signatures of hundreds of property owners along the avenue who would favor the change.

learned that two of her other four children had wandered into the woods some time ago and been lost for several hours.

Police Chief Philip J. McQuillan, of Greenburgh, in charge of the search, voiced the fear that the child had been kidnaped.

The child's father, an employe of the State insurance department, asked if he would pay a ransom, said:

Mechanic Under Arrest In Brutal Girl Murder

San Francisco, July 13 (AP).—Half buried under rubbish in a basement, the body of 8-year-old Elaine Watson was found today, and police held Albert F. W. Ruske on the asserted admission he had murdered a child. Ruske later today denied he killed Elaine.

Police Officer Robert Corson, of the Ingleside Station, asserted Ruske last night told Miss Elsie Fliodt, relative of Mrs. Ruske:

"I just killed a little girl. If you don't believe me, I'll take you down and show you the body."

The child's body was found today when police searched the neighborhood after Elaine's mother had become alarmed. The ghastly find was made in Ruske's basement. Ruske was arrested yesterday when his wife complained to police he was "drunk and acting insanely."

Ruske is 27, a mechanic and the father of three children.

Deputy Coroner Michael Brown said he believed the child had been beaten to death.

2 Colored Boys Elude Officers

Two colored youths escaped from the Receiving Home yesterday a few minutes after they had been brought in on charges of stealing accessories from autos parked near the Monument and Tidal Basin.

Sergt. C. T. Gillespie, park policeman, arrested the boys and confiscated four mirror-clocks which they had allegedly stolen from as many cars. They identified themselves as James P. West, 14, and James A. Johnson, 13.

Taken to the Receiving Home to be held for Juvenile Court, they were identified as fugitives from the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains. Confronted with record cards, they admitted they were Louis A. Davis, 13, of Cloud place nodtheast, and Israel Dudley, 15, of M place southwest.

The boys were seated in front of a desk when G. H. Leonard, superintendent, turned his back to answer the telephone. Quic kas a flash, they bolted through the front door. Leonard and a young "trusty" chased them for several blocks.

Scalded Lad Dies as Mother In Hospital Bears Daughter

Emergency blood transfusions offered by 40 people failed to save the life yesterday of 15-month-old George Prendergast, seriously scalded while playing in his mother's kitchen last week.

While his mother, Mrs. George Prendergast, of 1503 Lamont street northwest, was nearing motherhood at Georgetown University Hospital on July 5, the lad spilled boiling water from a stove which burned his arms, chest and head. Police sped the youngster to doctors at Children's Hospital, who shook their heads but gave a fifty-fifty chance of his recovery if immediate blood transfusions were made.

The boy's father offered aid but was rejected. Finally he called up radio station WJSV. Announcers broadcast:

"If you want to do a kind service to save a little boy who needs a blood transfusion . . . report to Children's Hospital."

Forty people responded. Five were chosen. The transfusions failed and he died soon after.

Meanwhile Mrs. Prendergast, who until yesterday did not know of her son's plight, gave birth to a baby girl. Doctors last night said she and her young daughter were "doing nicely."

Reports Conflict On Youth Sought In Death of Coed

Norman, Okla., July 13 (AP).—Temporarily at a stalemate in their investigation of the death of 20-year-old Marian Mills, University of Oklahoma beauty queen, authorities watched conflicting reports today of the flight of Neal Myers, missing university pharmacy student.

While Dr. P. B. Myers, of El Reno, the youth's father, asked Houston, Tex., police to broadcast an appeal for Neal's surrender, the student, who is wanted for questioning, was variously reported as headed for San Antonio, Tex., the Mexican border, or for a freighter berthed in the Gulf of Mexico.

Awaiting an autopsy report, due tomorrow or Monday, County Attorney Laul Updegraff reiterated his doubts that Mrs. Hazel Brown, fraternity cook in whose home the girl died Tuesday, has told everything she knows about the death.

Public Denied Benefits From NRA Price Cut

an indirect device to serve not only these purposes, but to break down the price-posting practice generally.

Numerous inquiries concerning the practical application of the President's order have been received at NRA, as about half of the existing 475 codes contain provision for filing of price schedules with code authorities. In each instance, it was said, the legal division is replying the public does not have to be granted a price as low as that accorded the Government.

"For Information Only."

A telegram sent to Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the Iron and Steel Institute, by R. W. Shannon, assistant deputy administrator, read as follows:

"Referring to the Executive order of June 29 modifying executive order No. 6646 of March 14, it is the opinion of our legal division that the filing with the code authority (prescribed in paragraph 1-b of Executive order of June 29) by a bidder of a bid price which he has quoted in accordance with Executive order of June 29, and which is below his filed price, is for information only and such filing of a bid price does not effect a change in the bidders' base prices then on file with the secretary in accordance with article 7 and schedule E of the Iron and Steel Code, any change in such filed base prices to be made in accordance with the provisions of the code."

On Wednesday Charles F. Conn, president of the Cement Institute, appeared before an NRA hearing and criticized the order as a blow at the foundations of the code structures and an invitation to "primitive and unintelligent methods of competition."

Test of Order Foreseen.

Officials declared privately that regardless of the legal division's decision the public probably in the long run would receive any price cuts granted to the Government. They predicted large private interests would drive down prices by refusing to pay more than the Government.

It was considered likely that the first test of the order's effect would come next month with the opening of bids on 24 ships by the Navy Department. Half of the vessels will be built by private shipyards.

Meanwhile, it was learned some NRA officials did not agree with the price stand of the legal division. Among that group was George S. Brady, an aid of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson on policy matters. He wrote a memorandum contending the Executive order meant all low bids on Government business should be regarded as a new price for the public.

The steel industry recently protested on the ground that its compliance with the code constituted a contract with the Government which could not be altered without its consent.

Article 7 of the revised steel code stipulated that no member could sell any product at terms more favorable to the purchaser than the prices it filed with the code authority.

"Each such lists," schedule E of the code provided, "shall state the date on which it shall become effective, which date * * * shall not be less than 10 days after the date of filing such list with the secretary; provided, however, that the first list of base prices filed by any member of the code as above provided shall take effect on the date of the filing thereof."

Kaye Don Says Aid Asked Fatal Drive

Douglas, Isle of Man, July 13 (AP). Testifying in his own defense at his trial for manslaughter, Kaye Don, British motor and steamboat racer, told a jury today that he took his racing car out on the night of May 28 at the suggestion of his mechanic, Francis Tayler, who was killed in a practice run on a highway.

Tayler suggested another test of the steering gears and brakes, Don testified, because the car had a tendency to "wander." This fault manifested itself at the moment of the accident, he continued, and the crash in which Tayler was killed resulted.

"I want every one to understand that I am not suggesting hat Tayler insisted on the car going out," Don said. "It was my car. I felt he had worked hard and wanted it tested."

State-owned San Francisco waterfront. Scattered instances of violence continued elsewhere in the city and the police mobilized for extraordinary duty.

A statement from Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam was awaited anxiously as to whether he would extend the National Guard lines further into the city.

Besides the striking longshoremen and maritime workers, more than 6,000 union men already were on strike in the bay area, about 5,000 more were ready to join them Saturday, and the central labor council's "strategy" committee met this afternoon to determine its recommendations for the 65,000 union men in the city. A general strike recommendation was expected.

Communist Leader Arrested.

The East Bay cities, including Oakland and Alameda, were similarly situated, with thousands of union men already on strike and others awaiting advice from the Alameda County Labor Council. There are about 45,000 union men in the East Bay district.

General strike talk broke out again in Portland. Handbills bearing the insignia of the Communist party were scattered through the streets. They called for a strike and for picketing against the Government as well as against "the bosses." Dirk De John, one-time Communist candidate for mayor, was arrested. Police also held 38 men in the railroad yards, where the arrival of agitators was being watched. A messenger was beaten by two men there.

Portland strikers made arrangements whereby 300,000 gallons of gasoline could be released to a farmers' cooperative for use in harvest work.

Los Angeles Quiet.

Los Angeles, where previously there had been talk of a general strike, also remained quiet. The harbor there has been kept open with nonunion help since the start of the longshoremen's strike last May 9.

Seattle likewise was quiet. Three maritime workers' locals voted yesterday for arbitration upon union control of hiring halls, the chief issue in the longshoremen's and seamen's strikes.

The employers previously agreed to arbitration of the longshoremen's issue, but the union stood firm in its refusal to arbitrate the matter of control of the hiring halls. The longshoremen finally said they would put the arbitration matter to a referendum, provided the employers would agree to arbitrate the issues in the other maritime strikes also. On these matters the board worked as the specter of the general strike moved nearer and nearer.

Travelers began leaving San Francisco when hotels issued warnings they would be able to serve meals only two or three more days.

Mayor Angelo J. Rossi said every effort would be extended to keep light, power and sanitation agencies functioning. Some clogging of garbage chutes due to a slowing down of the disposal system was reported, but the workers remained on the job. Street car men were reported ready to walk out.

Dairymen said they would ask the protection of troops if the movement of milk trucks was interrupted.

2 Killed, 3 Hurt In Cleveland Riot

Unemployed in the downtown riot crowd, and saw a concerted plan afoot to harass relief agencies.

Man Grabs Policeman's Gun.

Patrolman Thomas Gibbons called for a riot squad—the usual procedure when relief crowds get out of hand—and Lieut. Charles Kissling and Patrolman James Veseley responded.

A man grasped Veseley around the neck and grabbed the officer's service revolver.

"The man wheeled, spied Gibbons and fired," said Veseley later. "Gibbons fired back. The lieutenant started pushing his way to the man who had my gun, but he was too late. The firing increased suddenly.

"When it was over Gibbons was on the floor. Another man was lying on his face nearby. A little way over a Negro woman was dying."

Stampede for Exits.

Before the shooting had fairly started, there was a mad stampede for the exits. The 30 young women clerks in the office escaped. The rest made for the outside exits, and the room was deserted except for the police, the dead and the wounded. Outside, however, thousands of passersby began to gather, and traffic was snarled for blocks most of the afternoon.

After a check-up, the police gave out this casualty list:

The dead: Sam Arsenti, 45; an unidentified Negro woman.

The wounded: Patrolman Gibbons, 32, shot through the hip; Andrew Massisak, 42, shot in the leg, and Mrs. Anna Massisak, 40, his wife, wounded in the back.

In Casualty Hospital, Massisak seemed to think Gibbons had started tne firing, but admitted the scene was not clear.

Westernport, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Nevin H. Zuck, Ephrata, Pa., a student at Elizabethtown College, Elizabethtown, Tenn., has been appointed pastor of the Church of the Brethren for the summer. He was sent here by the General Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren.

Labor Board Anxiously Eyes Strike Danger

Is Powerless to Force Settlements; Green Apprehensive.

Members of the National Labor Relations Board kept anxious eyes on San Francisco and Minneapolis last night as organized labor threatened both cities with strike blockades.

The situations were so acute the labor board debated intervention, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, visibly perturbed, said he was "greatly worried."

In San Francisco, striking maritime workers, demanding union recognition, aroused prospects of a general strike as union after union walked out in sympathy, leaving the city in a beleaguered state. Minneapolis, meantime, was arming to combat a renewal of the truckers' strike which last spring turned streets into a bloody battlefield.

The San Francisco situation occasioned gravest concern here.

Because there is no shipping code, the Labor Board, which is charged with enforcing NRA labor provisions, is powerless to act except in a voluntary, but unenforceable, mediation capacity. A Presidential board is attempting this function, but thus far without results.

Board Has Only Prestige.

The National board, were it to intervene, would be forced to rely on its prestige and its title, the supreme court of labor, to bring the warring factions together. Dispatches received here indicated the longshoremen were in no mood even to recognize the National group although ship owners and shippers were represented as anxious for arbitration.

If a shipping code existed the board could, under labor clauses of the National Industrial Recovery Act, force arbitration and, this failing, deprive recalcitrants of their rights and impose added penalties through prosecution.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady was keeping Washington advised on San Francisco developments. He is a member of President Roosevelt's longshoremen mediation board. He was said to have wired that the shippers and maritime workers were in hopeless deadlock and that only an unforseen break would save the city from a disastrous tieup.

Minneapolis Situation Grave.

The Minneapolis situation was grave, but with less cause for apprehension.

Six thousand truckers who transport most of the city's food supplies were grimly determined to quit in order to enforce complete union recognition, but it was believed here that local and, possibly, State military authorities would adequately control the situation.

Another Federal conciliation board was working desperately there, however, hoping to win an amicable settlement.

Mr. Green told the United Press he had no plans, at present, to go to the Pacific Coast or to Minneapolis. He added, however, that he would visit either of these cities if it was felt his presence would be beneficial in adjusting the disputes.

Mr. Green is receiving hourly reports from both cities.

Green Apprehensive.

"The Pacific Coast situation is especially troublesome, and I am greatly worried," he said.

Asked if there was any way to avoid a general strike in San Francisco, Mr. Green said: "I do not know. I am depending on the good judgment of the President's board to settle this dispute amicably."

He declined further comment.

The National Labor Board yesterday issued its first official edict when it cited eight industrial concerns, accused of violating labor provisions of the recovery act, to show cause why they should not lose their Blue Eagles.

It was the initial step in a Nation-wide drive to eliminate friction between capital and labor, a campaign which the board hopes to extend to all industries.

Other strike fronts were quiet tonight as the board prepared to consult, over the week-end, with 20 of its regional groups out of which it hopes to formulate a program for equitable adjustment of future labor disputes.

U.S. to Probe Racket in Mail Order Divorces

Cummings to Determine If Attorneys Can Be Prosecuted.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said yesterday he had ordered an inquiry to determine whether there is basis for prosecution of American lawyers engaged in the Mexican mail-order divorce racket.

The mail order divorces have been especially popular in motion picture circles.

Thousands of Americans have obtained mail order divorces from Mexico. State courts in this country, having jurisdiction in all divorce matters, almost universally have held the Mexican decrees invalid in cases in which neither party to the divorce actually established residence in Mexico.

The stand of the United States courts leaves participants in these divorces liable, at least technically, to prosecution for bigamy if they marry again, jeopardizes the legitimacy of children of the second marriage and complicates property rights, according to the Justice Department.

Some lawyers are understood to have reaped a harvest by obtaining mail-order divorces which they assured their clients were legal in this country.

In behalf of the American Bar Association former Representative Joseph F. O'Connell, of Massachusetts, and State Senator Albert L. Scott, of South Dakota, urged Cummings to take Federal action against the lawyers engaged in the racket. Cummings said he had ordered a study of legal aspects of the matter to determine whether such attorneys could be prosecuted under the law forbidding use of the mails to defraud or under other Federal statutes.

Advertising of Divorces Brings Lawyer Penalty

Los Angeles, July 13 (AP).—Plans for a Federal inquiry into the legality of use of the mails to develop Mexican divorce business comes on the heels of a California investigation of divorce advertising.

Constantine Vincent Riccardi, known as a Mexican divorce lawyer, was fined $500 June 29 when he pleaded guilty in municipal court here to a charge of divorce advertising.

Three other similar cases await disposition.

Farmer Pleads Guilty To Murder of Three

McAlester, Okla., July 13 (AP).—Bun Riley, 25, Hill County farmer, pleaded guilty today to three charges of murder, abruptly ending his preliminary hearing for the killing of Homer Beasly, Hobart Watkins and William Gann in a canyon near Canadian, Okla., last month.

He was returned to State's prison here for safe keeping. Riley said he killed the three as the climax to a series of petty crimes in which all were involved.

Officers will be elected tomorrow. The Rev. J. P. Gulley, Crozet, is presiding at the meetings of the convention.

The climax for today was the address of Dr. J. Clyde Turner, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Greensboro, N. C., at the assembly, which began at 7:45 p. m., in the Baptist Tabernacle, following the vespers by the sea at 6 p. m. by Dr. Hight C. Moore, Nashville, Tenn.

One of the outstanding features of tomorrow night's program, at which B. F. Moomaw, president of the general association of Virginia, will be the main speaker, will be a pageant depicting 25 years of growth of the association in Virginia under the leadership of Miss Thelma Keene.

Farley Claims Party Gains In November

Speaker Concedes no Seats in Senate and Sees Chance for Wins.

Indianapolis, July 13 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley predicted in a speech here tonight that not only will Democratic majorities be reelected in November, but that the Republican strongholds of Pennsylvania. Maine, and probably Vermont, will be battered down.

"I look for Senate victory in New Jersey, Missouri and Ohio, Maryland and West Virginia," he said at a dinner in his honor. "We concede no Senate seats whatever. This goes for even such G. O. P. strongholds as Pennsylvania and Maine—yes, and I am not even leavinw Vermont out of the calculation."

Tonight's addres was the first of a series by Farley during a trip to the West Coast.

While expressing confidence that the House of Representatives will be Democratic by a large majority, Farley urged leaders not to let such a feeling slow their efforts in the coming election.

"This is no ordinary Congressional campaign on which we are engaged," Farley said. "Our President has been challenged; his policies have been belittled and misrepresented and our political adversaries are boldly proclaiming that their object is to elect a National Legislature that will repudiate what this Administration has offered as the solution of the problems that beset this Nation."

The speaker assailed United States Senator Arthur R. Robinson (Republican), Indiana, who last month was renominated as the opponent of Sherman Minton, of New Albany, the Democratic candidate.

Farley said Republican leaders, casting about for an issue for the 1934 campaign, "did not dare assail the President, for they knew that the country was behind him."

As evidence that the Roosevelt Administration is accomplishing something, Farley said building contracts have increased and production of automobiles and steel is much greater than a year ago. Millions more men are working than when the reconstruction program began, he claimed.

Plaintiff Can't Go To Court, So Court Goes to Kitchen

Chicago, July 13 (AP).—Judge Alfred O. Erickson today held kitchen court. Mrs. Josephine Cichowski, 88, was too feeble to go to the court, so the court went to her.

With full judicial dignity the court convened in her kitchen, still redolent with odors of recent cooking, to hear Mrs. Cichowski accuse her son-in-law, Steve Plecki, of stealing $1,200 buried in a glass jar in the basement.

Plecki admitted finding the money while chopping wood. "I didn't count it," he said. "I went out to pay some bills and have a fe wdrinks; when I came to I had only $30 left." The judge continued the case till Monday.

Franklin County Fruit Men Inspect Orchards in Adams

Waynesboro, Pa., July 13 (Spl.).—A score of Franklin County fruit growers today toured orchards of neighboring Adams County in this fruit belt of Pennsylvania.

The tour, arranged by County Agent J. H. Knode, was headed by H. E. Hodgekiss and L. B. Smith, extension entomologists; G. L. Zundel and R. S. Kirby, pathologists; H. N. Worthley and S. W. Frost, research workers, all of Pennsylvania State College.

The growers met at 9 a. m. at Caledonia Park, along the Lincoln highway, and motored to the orchards of Charles Kuhn, Cashtown, where 75 acres of apples and 14 acres of peaches were viewed. There the visitors saw partial cultivation with regular fertilizer application and a complete spray program.

The party next visited the B. E. Benner orchards at Iron Springs, which include 90 acres of early and late apples, all cultivated by lime and regular fertilizer application, dormant tar oil, and complete spray program. An explanation of the cultivation was given and the growers saw the sprayer in operation.

The tour halted at Arendtsville Union Park for a meeting and basket luncheon.

At the O. J. Hescock, Biglerville, orchards, codling moth research work was explained by Mr. Worthley, of the department of zoology and entomology, Penn State College. At 2:45, the Blue Ribbon Orchards of C. H. Musselman were visited and the final stop was made at the William Oyler orchards at Arendtsville, where oriental fruit moth research work was explained by S. W. Frost.

Pre-Revolution Plantation Goal of Lee Memorial Group

Stratford Hall, 60 Miles South of Washington, Being Restored.

(United Press.)

About 60 miles south of Washington, as the crow flies, on the Virginia side of the Potomac River, is Stratford Hall, a tract of land comprising 1,200 acres, which, it is hoped, eventually will become a replica of a prerevolutionary time plantation.

The project is being undertaken by the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, owners of the property. Primary purpose when the project first was organized five years ago was to create a memorial to the Lee family, famous for more than a century in the annals of the State of Virginia.

Historical data shows that the family, of which the famed Confederate Civil War general was a member, was prominent in the State from early in the eighteenth century until the South declined in power following the war.

Signed Declaration.

Two Lee brothers, in fact, were numbered among those patriots signing the Declaration of Independence, and they, as well as other Lees, played leading parts in the days when the United States of America was born.

The R. E. L. M. F. was chartered as a National organization in 1929, following several years of agitation among civic bodies of Virginia for a State society to undertake the work of creating a memorial to the Lees.

The organization was divided into State subdivisions, and its membership increased until now it has branches in 36 States. Many persons of wealth and prominence have become interested in the project, and it is through them that funds have been acquired to do the work.

Has Part of Lee Estate.

In 1932 the foundation had acquired 1,200 acres which one time had been a part of the original Lee estate, Stratford Hall. They were ready to begin the task of restoring the land to its original condition, as nearly as possible.

In seeking a person to superintend the actual carrying out of the project, they found Maj. Gen. B. F. Cheatham, retired, former quartermaster general of the Army. Gen. Cheatham consented to undertake the job of restoring the estate.

First thing he did was to restore the Lee mansion to its original condition, a job rendered doubly difficult because residents during the latter nineteenth and early twentieth centuries had almost completely changed the structure of the house. The task was completed, however, last fall.

Gardens Are Restored.

A group of Harvard undergraduates majoring in landscape architecture, who spent last summer at Stratford Hall as a field project section of their course, did various kinds of research work and finally presented plans showing what the gardens surrounding the mansion had been like in the days of the Lees. Then the Virginia State Garden Society did its part by contributing labor and materials with which to restore the gardens. Cost of this amounted to nearly $50,000.

Work now is being done on restoration of the remainder of the grounds to its original condition. Certain sections are being farmed, as they were when the Lees held sway. Cottages are being constructed.

Gen. Cheatham and the foundation hope that eventually they will be able to have tenant farmers, work shops, mills, and all the necessities of life on the estate itself. Their aim is to show the Nation, as nearly as possible, just how people did live on plantations in colonial times, emphasizing the need for self-sufficiency.

The pictures were found to be successful today.

Although especially fortified against what he feared would be the severe shock when he opened his first chute after the 1,000-foot fall, Degrange said the jerk was comparatively mild. He jumped face forward. He was falling head up, he said, when he held the camera at arm's length to snap a picture of his face. One hope was to register facial expression during the fall.

The high tower is being lowered to the second story and the 450-pound bell will rest on the roof of the church, the beams of which are as sound as the day they were put in. The work will be completed in time for the 150th anniversary celebration of the church in 1935.

Communist Threat Ignored by Head Of Norfolk Police

Norfolk, Va., July 13 (AP).—Director of Public Safety C. B. Borland said he was not concerned over reports that the Communists are recruiting followers in Norfolk and that this city is being prepared as one of the strategic points for the "world revolution."

The comment of the director was made yesterday in connection with a statement in an article appearing in the current issue of a weekly National magazine. The name of Matthew Woll, third vice president of the American Federation of Labor, is appended to the article as its author.

"Communist press," says the article, "shows that the sharpest recruitment gains of this union (the International Longshoremen's Association) have been in New Orleans, Savannah, Norfolk, Hampton Roads, Portsmouth, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, San Francisco and Seattle. The reason, under Communist strategic plans, is simple—such ports would be naval or supply bases."

By raising grievances, the article says, the "Reds" induce men to leave their jobs in this union, and then the Reds take the jobs.

Motion Picture Exhibitors Are Granted Discretionary Powers in Showing Films

Hays' Office Is Ally of Drive Against Filth

Real Protest Potent Ban; Mary Brian Goes Home; Theater Gossip.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Amplifying Will H. Hays' statement of two weks ago, which concerned the action to amend and strengthen the system of industry self-regulation established by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the following companies, members of that association, announced this week that each would grant to exhibitors the right to omit the exhibition of any otheir motion pictures released prior to July 15, 1934, against which there is a genuine protest on moral grounds.

Columbia Pictures.
Educational Films.
First National.
Fox Films.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
Paramount Pictures.
RKO-Radio.
United Artists.
Universal Pictures.
Warner Brothers.

This means that in any community in which there is genuine concerted objection to the showing of a particular picture on moral grounds an exhibitor who has contracted to exhibit that picture will be given the right to omit its exhibition without obligation for its rental.

Code Authority Effective.

The reason for the limitation of this cancellation privilege to pictures generally released prior to July 15 is because that is the date upon which the new regulatory provisions go into effect. After that date the association's production code administration will function with increased authority and the board of directors of the association will assume final responsibility for all future motion pictures distributed by members of the ssociation.

To identify all films bearing the approval of the association's production code administration, a distinctive seal has been adopted and will be shown on the screen directly after the main title of all pictures. This seal, which every picture released after July 15 by members of the association will bear, will be evidence of the industry's pledge that every precaution has been taken to insure compliance with the production code of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

A brief, but extremely pleasant, "good-by" visit with Mary Brian in her dressing room at Loew's Fox last night unobtrusively brought out the fact that Miss Brian looks upon her week in Washington as one of the pleasantest in her career before the public. She was particularly appreciative of the unfailing courtesy and thoughtfulness of Division Manager Carter Barron, Lou Brown, of the Loew publicity department, and Manager Steinbuch, of the Fox, in providing for her entertainment between and after performances and the psysical comfort of herself and her mother, who accompanies her en tour.

Mary leaves the Capital today by train for Chicago, whence she will proceed to the Coast by plane. Arriving in Hollywood, she will have about three weeks of rest in her attractive home and then will close the house indefinitely and return East to appear importantly in the new Lew Brown stage musical to be put into early rehearsal with Abe Lyman's Band, Roscoe Ates and possibly the exotic and temperamental Mme. Pola Negri also conspicuously spotted. Gordon and King, her dancing partners, returned to New York last night.

We greatly prize a handsome autographed photograph of Miss Brian, presented us gracefully in parting. All of Washington would welcome an early return of so captivating a young woman as Mary Brian to a local stage. It is not impossible that the Lew Brown production will be seen here prior to going into New York.

Another "Name" Band.

Hot on the heels of the triumphant presentation of Luis Russell and his sensational "Old Man River" orchestra Wednesday night, Eddie Carr and Al Stern are all set for the one-night appearance of Felix Ferdinando and his celebrated band at Chevy Chase Lake tonight. It is expected that tonight's crowd will match the extraordinary outpouring that greeted the Russell organization.

Felix Ferdinando is rated by music critics as one of the outstanding band directors of the day. His varied career has embraced appearances on stage, screen, radio and in the country's foremost concert halls and hotels. He has the distinction of being probably the best-known military band leader produced from the ranks of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War.

In addition to its straight dance numbers, the Ferdinando Orchestra has a wide variety of novelty numbers which it offers, foremost among them being their "Musical Bullfight," a realistic feature interpreted by clarinet and Sousaphone, after the manner of Fred Waring's memorable "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," done with trumpet and trombone.

Prof. Phil Lampkin, who after many years is still billed as the youngest southpaw baton swisher presiding over any orchestra in a major de luxe theater, which, in a manner of speaking, might be construed as slang for Loew's Fox, left town yesterday for California and the first visit he will have enjoyed with his parents in something like four years. This was intimated here several days ago, but it seems now that the lad actually has gone. Happy landings!

A Keith Innovation.

There has been much complaint from patrons of motion pictures concerning the brevity of the showing of technical details of feature productions in what are known to the trade as a picture's "main title"—authorship, adaptors, director, cast, &c.

To overcome this flagrant but largely unavoidable shortcoming of the cinema, RKO-Keith's Theater has installed an attractive bulletin board in its outer lobby on which all of this desirable information is set forth for the patron's perusal at his leisure.

Much appreciation already has been expressed to the management of this guide to the details of production, so much more comprehensible than the brief flashes shown upon the screen and immediately forgotten, if, indeed, they can be fully read at all.

Joe E. Brown, whose name in his forthcoming six-day bike racing film is "Curly," has had his hair marceled for the occasion and is said to look like two or three different fellows! This is the picture in which Maxine Doyle, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, is to play the feminine lead. It occurs to us now that that picture we printed of her here a few weeks ago, dressed in a tricky pull-over sweater and shorts and hanging onto a bicycle probably was a lead-up to this assignment. Or is that the way she really rides to work, Mr. Melcher? Or weren't you up that early, either?

Captain Not Alone!

Tala Birell, who made so auspicious a debut in American films in that gorgeous Alpine subject dealing with a doomed battalion on a mountain top in the Great War and then faded into comparative obscurity, has been selected as principal feminine player in "The Captain Hates the Sea," now in production on the West Coast under the direction of Lewis Milestone, who made "All Quiet on the Western Front."

It is highly probable that before this film is finished many more than the captain will hate the sea. And thereby hangs a tale.

Approximately 150 members of "The Captain Hates the Sea" unit are marooned aboard the S. S. Ruth Alexander in Pacific waters. It was the original expectation that the sea sequences for the picture would be "in the cans" within a week, but the ship happened into a streak of foggy weather for ten days and not a wheel was turned. Only now is sunlight beginning to make it seem likely that the sea scenes will be completed within another ten days.

Keating Has an Ace.

In the meantime, the longshoremen's strike has made it seem something less than feasible for the Ruth Alexander to dock anywhere along the southern California coast, so it merely anchors inside the breakwater in Catalina Channel at night and nobody is allowed to go ashore.

In the cast are Victor McLaglen, John Gilbert, Wynne Gibson, Luis Alberni, Vera Steadman, Fred Keating and about 25 other principals and 120 technicians.

Fred Keating is the only one able to beat the monotony. He is able to do card tricks and make a bird disappear from its cage!

Afterthought.

That is to say, Fred Keating could make a bird disappear from its cage if he had the bird, but Director Lewis Milestone, who got them into it, is the one everybody is giving the "bird!"

Old Favorites Who Carry On

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 12.—The title of Mae West's picture, one of the most controversial of subjects in pictures just lately, has been finally settled. It will be called "The Belle of New Orleans." The star is now completing scenes in which Roger Pryor and she appear. The picture will have its second try before the censors after these are completed. It is expected that it will be passed, but the attitude of the church bodies may not agree with that of the censor boards.

FAY WRAY.

The title grew to be a very distinct issue, and for a time a new one seemed to puzzle all hands about the studio. The picture has had a tremendous amount of publicity as originally christened, "It Ain't No Sin," and then received a second baptism as "That St. Louis Woman." The present title is regarded as suiting the picture very satisfactorily, provided no sudden and unexpected snags are encountered. These might possibly take the form of a conflict with a picture of similar name produced by some independent company, although that has now been all pretty well investigated.

* * * *

"The Notorious Sophie Lang."

Fine until the finish is "The Notorious Sophie Lang," as previewed recently. It is a well contrived Raffles-like feature, which discloses a battle royal between two rival jewel thieves and the police. The spot where the picture falls down is in letting the crooks off too easily toward the close. The finish is a bit vague.

Sophie Lang is a mysterious lady who steals for the thrill of it. She hoodwinks the police and she also gets the better of a somewhat celebrated European gentleman with many aliases.

That's about the size of the plot. It is really the situations that make the picture interesting, and they are very good, for the most part. The weak finish can perhaps be remedied.

* * * *

Ill and Injured.

Warner Baxter is now on the sick list. He caught a severe cold while on location for "Broadway Bill," and the scenes in which he was to appear have been postponed, because he has lost his voice temporarily. Meantime, the company is shooting other scenes than those in which he plays, so that the production is moving ahead. He is at his home now, and as soon as he recovers his voice will return to the location.

W. C. Fields has just recovered from an accident in a tennis match a few weeks ago, which caused a torn ligament. It was necessary to alter certain portions of the script of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," so that Fields could appear with a cane.

* * * *

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

J. M. Kerrigan has been assigned to the picture, "Gentlemen Are Born," which started shooting Monday.

Maxine Doyle has been chosen to play opposite Joe E. Brown in "The Six Day Bike Rider."

Ralph Bellamy will be on the scene here for one day, and will take part in a radio broadcast and then immediately return East. He has just completed "The Woman in the Dark" for Select Pictures with Fay Wray opposite.

Add sick list: Lupe Velez is under the weather, due to a cold. She has just arrived in town, and was slated for "The Girl Friend," but that picture is now being held up.

Russell Hopton and Harry Tyler, as well as Hobart Cavenaugh, are in "I Sell Anything," with Pat O'Brien and Ann Dvorak.

Howard J. Green's play, "Happy Landing," is to be produced on Broadway this coming fall.

Pat Flaherty, erstwhile pitcher for the New York Giants, has been signed up as trainer and instructor for the film, "Death on the Diamond." It is said that he will also take a part in the cast.

Latest word is that Sylvia Sidney's condition of health is improving. She had a recurrence of the trouble with her salivary glands which caused her much agony about a year ago.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For).

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

This is the second story in an employment survey series by the Federal Diary in the various Government departments, independent offices and "alphabet" agencies. A little scrapbook of this series will prove a valuable blue book to thousands of job-seekers and their friends.

AMONG the mos. persistent inquiries reaching the Federal Diary desk on prospects of obtaining work are from persons who think the Federal Alcohol Control Administration is a large and expanding organization. Job-seekers think that as more States become legally wet, the FAGA expands accordingly.

BAKER.

To begin with, the FACA has the smallest personnel of any of the "alphabet" organizations, and it is smaller now than when it was formed on the Executive Order of December 4, 1933.

Instead of expanding, the FACA is retrenching. Three employes were dismissed July 1, and seven more have been dropped since then, leaving the personnel at only 87, the Federal Diary was informed last night by Harris E. Willingham, assistant director in charge of personnel and member of the FACA board.

The FACA maintains no field offices, the entire staff being located on the third floor of the Transportation Building at Seventeenth and H streets northwest. It has nothing to do with chasing bootleggers and collecting revenues. Those two functions belong to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Treasury.

As the FACA is an emergency organization, the employes are on an emergency basis, being appointed for 30-day periods. These appointments, of course, are renewed each month with the exception of minor dismissals. Five of those former FACA employes have obtained positions elsewhere with the assistance of Mr. Willingham.

FACA deals almost exclusively with enforcement of six codes of fair competition in the liquor industry, as follows:

The wine industry, the distilled spirits industry, the nonalcoholic beverages importing industry, the distilled spirits rectifying industry, the brewing industry, and the wholesale industry.

FACA employes have been working quite a bit of overtime this spring. In recognition of this overtime work, stenographers, typists and messengers were given three days off last week. Half of the staff was off the Fourth and two preceding days, and the other half enjoyed the remainder of the week off.

Working conditions were found yesterday satisfactory at FACA. There was no evidence of overcrowding and insanitary conditions, such as exist in the AAA divisions quartered in the old Postoffice Building.

Ira M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers International Union, has been appointed to the NRA code authorities for the three tobacco trades so far approved. He will serve as Administration member of the code authorities for the wholesale tobacco trade and the retail tobacco trade and as Labor Advisory Board member of the cigar manufacturing industry code authority.

Dr. John Donaldson Elected.

All officers elected by the Delta Phi Epsilon Foreign Service Fraternity at its recent convention are Federal employes. They are:

Dr. John Donaldson, special adviser to the President, Commerce, president; Edward J. Jutz, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, National secretary; J. Harold Stehman, Commerce, National treasurer; Arthur E. Beach, State, National alumni secretary, and Oscar Peterson, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, National editor.

Mr. Peterson received a gold key for meritorious service to the fraternity. Mr. Jutz also is an official of Commerce Branch of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Marker"); or to Loew's Palace (third week of William Powell and Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Vincent Lopez orchestra and revue; screen, "Stamboul Quest").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sundays, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Employes Are Organizing.

The successful membership drive of the National Federation of Federal Employes at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has led to a new organization policy of Local No. 71, composed of colored Federal employes. A large group of press wipers at the Bureau joined the N. F. F. E. and it was decided this group should have an organization of their own.

At the last meeting of No. 71, a policy of creating branches out of the local was adopted with a view to stimulating more interest in the organization in the various divisions where it operates. The first branch, organized yesterday, will be known as the Press Wipers Branch, No. 1, of Local No. 71.

Within a few days, the Agricultural Progressive Branch, No. 2, is expected to complete organization. Branches also will be projected in the Veterans' Administration, Department of Justice, Government Printing Office and Bureau of Internal Revenue, according to Edward Scott, president of Local No. 71.

Miss Gertrude M. McNally, National secretary-treasurer, and Miss Matilda Lindsay, National organizer, spoke to the organization meeting of the first branch. Miss Nally inducted the following officers:

The Rev. S. T. Goffney, president; Carlos Roberson, secretary, and William Stockett, treasurer. The Rev. Howard Barnes and Clarence M. Bowles will be collectors for the unit.

The next meeting will be on July 26, when a constitution will be drawn and committees appointed.

5 Campaigners Are Selected For Gov. Ritchie

Named to Defend Chief During His Vacation Trip to Europe.

Baltimore, July 13 (Spl.).—Five members of the "high command" of Gov. Ritchie's division of the Democratic party in Maryland have been named to carry on the Governor's campaign for reelection while he is on his vacation in Europe, it was learned today.

The leaders named to push the drive are Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner; State Purchasing Agent Walter H. Kirkman; William O. Codd, chief auditor of the State roads commission; William Curran and Robert B. Ennis, Baltimore Democratic leaders.

Each in Special Field.

It will be the function of this group to defend the Governor's administration from the attacks of Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, opponents of Gov. Ritchie for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Each of the five men will have a definite part in this campaign of rebuttal. Mr. Codd will deal with charges against the administration of the State road commission. Mr. Kirkman, by virtue of his position of budget director, will answer charges dealing with taxes and business administration.

Mr. Winebrenner will be in charge of political strategy in the counties, while Mr. Curran and Mr. Ennis will deal with political developments in the city of Baltimore.

In the opposition camp, headed by Mayor Jackson, there was considerable activity today. The mayor announced the appointment of George W. Rife to be general chairman of the Jackson campaign committee in Baltimore. Tomorrow he will announce the membership of the committee.

To Open Headquarters.

Jackson headquarters will be opened within a week at a downtown hotel, a Lawyers Jackson-for-Governor Club is to be organized and members of a woman's committee are to be named.

Upon the formation of the city committee, the mayor will start organization of Jackson committees in each county, he said today. Skeleton organizations are already functioning in many counties, but a complete State organization is to be named.

State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Connor's campaign for the nomination for attorney general received impetus today when 39 of the leading Democratic lawyers of the Eastern Shore signed a document indorsing his candidacy. Every county on the Eastern Shore, except Dorchester, was represented on the paper.

Conley Conference Held.

Meanwhile an effort to line up the support of Eastern Shore Democratic leaders behind the candidacy of Dr. Charles H. Conley for the gubernatorial nomination is under way here, following a conference yesterday between Dr. Conley and former Governor Emerson C. Harrington, of Dorchester County.

Also present at the conference was Dr. J. Hubert Wade, of Washington County. Dr. Wade is said to be one of Dr. Conley's supporters in the Western Maryland area.

No announcement was made as to the results of the conference between the former Governor and the would-be Governor, but it was learned Mr. Harrington had not committed himself to supporting Dr. Conley. The drive to line up other Eastern Shore leaders is continuing, however.

Ritchie Opposition Strong.

It is argued that if Mr. Harrington will back Dr. Conley, other Eastern Shore Democrats will join the battle in behalf of the Frederick physician.

Their support, plus that of leaders in western Maryland, Dr. Conley's home territory, will enable the physician to make a strong bid for the gubernatorial nomination.

Opposition to Gov. Ritchie is said to be intense on the Eastern Shore and the leaders there are reported anxious to line up with an opposition candidate. Any candidate for a county position who ran as a supporter of the Governor would be virtually certain of defeat, it is said, and for that reason a hook-up with either Dr. Conley or Mayor Howard W. Jackson, the other opponent of the Governor for the nomination, is said to be almost a certainty.

Twigg Seeks Senate Seat From Carroll County

Westminster, Md., July 13 (Spl.). C. C. Twigg, Westminster, has announced his candidacy for the State Senate from Carroll County on the Democratic ticket.

John Wood, Westminster, announced his candidacy yesterday for State's attorney of Carroll County, subject to the Democratic primaries. He will be opposed in the primaries by Bruce T. Bair, while George N. Fringer is the only Republican candidate for State's attorney to announce his intentions.

Veasey Seeks Return In Worcester County

Berlin, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—State Senator Milton L. Veasey, of Worcester County, a member of the administration block in the Legislative sessions of 1931 and 1933, today announced his candidacy for reelection to the Senate of Maryland, subject to the Democratic primary election in September.

Senator Veasey, a lawyer, real estate operator and banker of Pocomoke City, is also the Eastern Shore representative of the Maryland State Roads Commission in the securing of rights of way for roads and in condemnation proceedings, to which post he was appointed last January. The post carries an annual salary of $3,600.

Red Cross First-Aid Station Dedicated at Stephens City

The Red Cross Chapter of Winchester and Frederick County, Va., dedicated this week the first highway first-aid station in Virginia, which also is believed to be the first in the United States. The station, situated at Stephens City, is to be conducted as an experiment and if it is believed of great value to motorists, additional stations are to be established, Red Cross officials stated. The Winchester Rotary Club sponsored the station, furnishing the equipment. The above photo shows the placing of the marker in front of the station. Those in the picture are (left to right), kneeling: Taylor Barr, first-aid instructor of the Red Cross chapter; John L. Teets, Washington, field representative American Red Cross National headquarters, and Frank R. Horton, Boy Scout executive. Front row, standing, Dowell J. Howard, president of the Winchester Rotary Club; Charles Coffman, Mrs. Lottie Wolfe, Mrs. P. C. Petrie, Miss Mary Warden Boyd, Miss Jane Rhodes, Mrs. Bertha M. Hicks, John S. Scully, jr., and Miss Carrie Lupton. Rear row, Mrs. Daniel W. Lupton, Miss Polly Lam, Mrs. C. O. Watson, Miss Elizabeth Wolfe, Miss Elinor Scully, Mrs. Leslie D. Kline and the Rev. Robert B. Nelson.

2 Killed, 2 Hurt As Auto, Truck Crash on Hill

Frederick, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Two persons were instantly killed and two seriously injured when a truck loaded with beer apparently sideswiped the automobile of the victim on a hill a short distance from Knoxville, 22 miles from this city, at 11 o'clock last night.

The dead are William C. Marker, 42, and his mother, Mrs. John H. Marker, 60, near Middletown. The injured, both in the City Hospital, are Howard Marker, 14, son of William C. Marker, and Samuel Vincent, 24, Winchester, Va., driver of the truck. Young Marker suffered severe lacerations about the head and body and concussion of the brain. Vincent had lacerations about the face and concussion of the brain.

The Markers were returning from a revival meeting at Knoxville, in which Mr. Marker took part. As they were ascending Payne's Hill the truck, with a trailer attached, appeared headed for Knoxville. The driver of the truck, it was said, swerved his machine as he went down the hill to pull over to the side of the road, but the trailer, carrying about 200 cases of beer, upset against the automobile. The truck continued a short distance down the road and also upset.

Marker was found under the machine. The body of his mother had been dragged from the rear seat to the front fender and her head was crushed. Vincent and Howard Marker were rushed to the Frederick Hospital. A fifth man, Jack Vincent, brother of the truck driver, leaped from the truck an instant before the crash and escaped with minor injuries.

Marker was the proprietor of a hatchery and was well known throughout Middletown Valley. He is survived by his wife, another son and daughter. Mrs. Marker is survived by her husband, a farmer of Middletown Valley; two daughters and a son.

W. Va. Will Enforce Sterilization Law

Wheeling, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Enforcement of West Virginia's law for sterilization of the hopelessly insane will be undertaken in the near future as the result of conferences by the State public health council, according to Dr. A. H. Hoge, of Bluefield, its president.

The law was passed in 1929, Dr. Hoge said, but details of procedure are yet to be established.

The State public health council is to serve as a court for hearing proposals that mentally unfit persons be sterilized, but its decisions may be appealed to higher courts. It was brought out that 27 States now have sterilization laws.

Soviet Steamer Off Baltimore Boasts Women to Cook Meals

Baltimore, July 13 (Spl.).—Docked today at Port Covington, in Baltimore Harbor, the Soviet freighter Kalinin is unloading a cargo of chrome ore. She is the second Russian ship to enter this port since the United States recognized the U. S. S. R.

Food prepared by two young women stewardesses is as unusual for sailors as other features of the ship.

For instance, ice cream and cake are frequently on the menu for the ordinary seaman, and tea is their favorite drink. They consume virtually no vodka, the traditional Russian drink. Other items on the sailors' menu include chicken, cutlets, white bread and eggs.

The Kalinin will remain in port for several days and then will sail for New York, where she will take on a cargo of farm machinery. She will head for Russia about the middle of August.

As was the case with the Komsomal, the first Russian ship to dock here several months ago, the crew of the Kalinin enjoys a degree of social parity with the officers that is unheard of on ships of other nations. The men fraternize with the officers during their hours off, and all eat in the same mess hall. But there is no shrine to Lenin, such as the Komsomal had.

Student Relief Plan Extended

Private Colleges of First Class Rating Also Qualified.

Richmond, July 13 (Spl.).—Private colleges of first-class rating will participate in the Federal emergency relief funds, for students as well as State-supported institutions, it was learned at the State department of education today.

This class includes not only such institutions as give regular academic courses, but others such as the Virginia Theological Seminary, at Alexandria, and the Union Theological Seminary and the General Assembly Training School in Richmond, which discharge special functions, it was stated.

Such students as are eligible to these relief funds will receive a maximum of $20 per month, and the regulations prescribe that they must be given socially desirable work.

It is estimated that such an institution as the University of Virginia would receive relief for approximately 350 students under the plan laid out by the relief committee. Other institutions would receive relief based on their enrollment of full-time students.

Elks to Convene At Portsmouth

Portsmouth, Va., July 13 (AP).—This seaside city, host to Elks of Virginia at their State convention August 6 and 7, is making elaborate plans for entertainment including an excursion to Virginia Beach and a boat ride and dancing on Chesapeake Bay.

The Elks will register on Sunday, August 5, although the convention will not open until Monday morning. J. Alden Oast, Mayor of Portsmouth, and J. M. Overton, secretary of the chamber of commerce and the Retail Merchants Association, will address the opening business session.

J. Grover Mayo, State president and a member of the Portsmouth lodge, will preside.

Omwake Will To Aid College

Waynesboro Man Leaves Estate Valued at $109,000.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 13 (Spl.). The will of the late William Tell Omwake, of Waynesboro, Pa., long a distinguished member of the Franklin County bar, has been offered for probate. His daughter, Matilda Omwake Newman, S. F. Newman and Judge Watson R. Davidson, were named executors. The original will was dated February 8, 1924. A codicil was added later. The estate was estimated at $109,000.

Eleven hundred dollars is given to Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa., for a scholarship in memory of his father and mother, to be known as the "Henry and Evelyn Omwake Scholarship."

Nine hundred dollars of a fund for the benefit of his sister, Mary Matilda Omwake, is added to the Ursinus scholarship at her death, making the total Ursinus fund $2,000.

The will also provides for the payment of $5,000 to Mercersburg Academy.

Funds were established for Dr. F. F. Bahner, long a prominent minister of the Reformed Church, and his wife, now deceased. The amount fixed was $3,000. Under the provision of the will, half of the amount goes to Waynesboro Hospital, due to the death of Mrs. Bahner more than a year ago. Upon the death of Dr. Bahner, who is now living with a daughter in Erie County, the remainder will go to the same institution.

After making provisions for members of his family, half of the residue of the estate is bequeathed to his wife, who died recently, and the other half to his daughter, Matilda Omwake Newman.

Democrats Pick Slate in Charles

La Plata, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Charles County Democrats have announced their candidates for offices in the fall elections.

The following have been or will soon be asked to run: W. Bruce Matthews, State Senate; Rudolf Carrico and William J. Frear, Assembly; Allen Klimkiewicz, county commissioner; George I. Gardiner, jr., register of wills; Edward J. Edelen, renamed for State's attorney; Edward L. Sanders, who was defeated in the last election by Joseph A. Howard, renamed for county treasurer.

Fall Into Cistern Fatal to Woman

Rippon, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Mrs. Florence Marlowe, 59, was found dead in a cistern at her home, near here, this morning by her sister, Mrs. J. H. Gaynor.

The deceased, a native of this section, had been in ill health for about a year. It is believed she became ill and fell into the well. Acting Coroner J. D. Walker and Prosecuting Attorney John Porterfield declared an inquest unnecessary.

Mrs. Marlowe is survived by her sister and three brothers, Walter and Joseph Bell, of Berryville, Va., and Phillip Bell, of Charles Town.

Theater Benefit Set to Help Stafford County Children

Fredericksburg, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Further assistance for the Stafford County tubercular families being cared for through the activity of the Stafford County Health Association will be given Wednesday with a benefit theater performance sponsored at a local theater.

B. T. Pitts, theater manager, has agreed to advertise next Wednesday's showing as a benefit program and to donate all proceeds over actual expenses.

The dance held last Wednesday at the Mansfield Hall Country Club netted more than $200 to be used in caring for the children, association officials said. Private contributions totaling $125 also have been received.

Fourteen children in two related families, eight of whom are afflicted with tuberculosis, are residing in a small insanitary dwelling in Stafford County. Funds are being sought to construct a sleeping porch and to supply medical treatment both for protection of those children not yet suffering from the disease and the care of those already ill.

Meanwhile, preliminary steps were being taken today to raise funds for Spotsylvania County tuberculosis sufferers, after Miss Lynda Bray, State emergency relief nurse, reported yesterday that there were 185 victims of the disease in the county and that 7 were in imminent danger of death unless immediate treatment could be provided.

Chancellor District committee has arranged an entertainment for July 19 as the first effort to raise funds. Similar action was expected throughout the remainder of the county.

One hundred and twenty-one white residents and 64 colored people have positive evidences of tuberculosis, Miss Bray's report disclosed.

W. Va. May Get Rule on Voting By "Absentees"

Question of "Residence" in Divorce Action Affects Ballots.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—The status of "absentee" voters, particularly those living in Washington and who maintain their "voting" residence elsewhere, appeared headed for a study by the Supreme Court of West Virginia today as a result of certification of a case involving the "residence" of a litigant in a divorce proceeding but which was regarded by court observers as also possessing bearings on the voting situation.

William M. Delancey, in the case under examination, filed suit in Berkeley County Court here against his wife, Katherine M. Delancey, for divorce. Delancey formerly resided in this city and for several years was the city recorder. In recent years he has lived in Washington. Mrs. Delancey also now resides in Washington. Their "voting" residence has been this city after they went to the Capital. The suit, it was indicated, was filed there on the assumption that this would be construed as their "residence" because it was their place of "voting."

The matter has been in court for several months, but this week Judge D. H. Rodgers refused to take jurisdiction after a question had been raised. The decision of the court on the question said:

"No suit shall be maintained unless the parties or one of them shall have resided in the State one year next preceding of time of bringing the suit.

Judge Certifies Facts.

Judge Rodgers, to permit the plaintiff to have the higher court review the case, certified the facts as to residence of the parties as set up in the bill and the answer thereto.

Interested political leaders saw in the case a precedent which might be used to challenge the right of District of Columbia residents to vote here. The election law provides:

"The citizen of the State shall be entitled to vote at all elections held within the precincts of the counties in which they respectively reside. But no person * * * who has not been a resident of the State for one year * * * and who is not at the time of the election an actual and bona fide resident of the election precinct in which he offers to vote * * * shall be permitted to vote at such election."

Code Draws Distinction.

"In actual practice the distinction plainly made in existing laws between residence and citizenship has not been observed. Persons with no residence within the State, county or precinct have voted in large numbers, although existing laws, properly construed, preclude such voting. To end this fraudulent unlawful voting, a specific provision of what shall constitute residence is inserted. As defined, residence is made of physical elements, capable of specific proof or demonstration, and fraudulent practices, which have prevailed, are rendered impossible."

Political leaders are watching the review of the case with much interest particularly in view of the impending revision of the voters' lists in this State this month in anticipation of the primary August 7 and the election in November.

Old Home to Pass In Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—The wheels of progress will cause a local home, occupied by a Fredericksburg family since Civil War days, to be replaced by a gasoline service station, August 1.

The home of Miss Lou Proctor, bought by her father soon after the Civil War, has been purchased by a Baltimore real estate firm for use as a filling station. Miss Proctor has lived in the home for 60 years.

While not the oldest dwelling here, the house has attracted considerable tourist interest because of its quaint architecture, said by a visiting architect to be duplicated in only two other homes in the country.

Hagerstown, Md., July 13 (Spl.). Carrying out its warning that it would not countenance public nuisances, the Board of Liquor License Commissioners for Washington County today revoked beer license of James E. Saylor, proprietor of an inn west of here.

Similar action will be taken in other cases where there is evidence of disorderly conduct, members of the board said.

Shale Strata Held Fatal Slide Cause

Waynesboro, Pa., July 13 (Spl.).—A study was being made today of a strata of shaly rock believed a contributing factor toward the Waynesboro sewer ditch tragedy last Friday.

The shale was discovered about 4 feet below the surface at its high point yesterday afternoon by relief workers who began reexcavation of the ditch. The shale sheered down at about a 40-degree angle to a point not much above the bottom of the ditch. From above, the shale looked like a large rock. However, pieces could be broken off with the fingers and crumbled in the hand.

Apparently the slant of shale was only at the fatal point, though there was shale elsewhere along the ditch. The place of sheering off was the center of the slide. From the appearance of the shale, any number of things could have caused the ground to slip. A jar could have done it, engineers who examined the rock said.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Deer Hangs Himself

It was a day for another early breakfast, for it was a long way to the place where Jocko was to shoot the deer, but Bettie said she didn't mind cooking so early in the morning when she knew the boys were going to bring back a whole wagon-load of something that was tasty.

Blackie said it didn't look like there was any need for everybody to go on the hunt, since nobody but Jocko and the dogs could do anything about killing the deer.

"But it looks to me like there's going to be a lot of need for somebody when it comes to putting the deer on the wagon," said Grandpa Bear. "Do you reckon that deer is just going to run on over and find the wagon and fall in it when he finds that Jocko has shot him? I don't much think he will, and so I think there's going to be a plenty of need for Grandpa Bear to help Grandpa Deer on Mr. Man's wagon. That's why I am going along."

And that settled the point. So, by the time the sun was well up, they were a long way from home, and the dogs were clear out of sight. When they got near to where Jocko was to wait for the deer, they stopped Hee-Haw, and Jay Bird went ahead and showed Jocko the big tree where he was to hide. It seemed a pretty long time to Jocko before he heard anything from the dogs, but after a while he did hear just a little bit of a howl.

Then it got louder and louder. And then he could hear both dogs saying "How-oo, How-oo" and they were not very far off. Closer and closer they came and Jocko could hear the bushes breaking as the deer came crashing through with his great horns.

Just as he got up close enough for Jocko to shoot him, Jay Bird, who was sitting up over Jocko's head, screamed "jay," just as loud as he could. This surprised the deer so that he stopped right still, and was fixing to dodge whoever it was that hollered at him. That was Jocko's chance, and "pow-pow" went both barrels of his gun.

When the shot hit the deer he jumped so high that his head went away up in the tree Jay was sitting in and his great bushy horns caught over some limbs, and there he hung so high that his feet couldn't touch the ground. But he wasn't quite dead, and the way he was kicking was a sight.

When they all came running up, Hound Dog shouted: "Keep away from those feet; they are as sharp as knives, and he will cut you all to pieces!"

Grandpa was right. It took every one of them to put the deer on the wagon, and all but Jocko had to walk home.

"What are you grinning about, Billie?" asked Dr. Coon, as they started home.

"I was just thinking about what that deer did. A deer can outrun dogs, and he knows it, and it just looks to me like he was ashamed for anybody to catch him. So when he knew he was killed, he hung himself to keep anybody from saying that they killed him."

And Dr. Coon didn't have a thing to say.

Strange as it seems, many grapefruit are grown on orange trees. At least the trees were originally orange trees; later they were cut off, and on the stump of the orange trees grapefruit were grafted.

This was done in Florida in 1894 when a killing freeze ruined many orange trees. Growers found that the trees, although frozen to the ground, were undamaged below the ground. To these stumps they grafted grapefruit.

The usual practice in grapefruit culture is to grow seedlings from either grapefruit or sour orange seeds, then by the "budding" process, graft buds from a mature grapefruit tree onto the seedling. After this the top of the seedling is cut off, and the bud continues to grow—eventually becoming the tree. For this seedling stock both grapefruit and orange are widely used. Thus it is that while the roots of the grapefruit-producing tree were grown from a seed (either orange or grapefruit), the top grew from a bud of a mature tree.

The reason for this is strange. It, for example, 100 grapefruit seeds from the same tree were planted, and they all grew into bearing trees, they might produce nearly as many different varieties of grapefruit—and none of them might be like the parent tree. If, however, buds from a tree of known quality are grafted onto seedlings of unknown quality, the resultant tree will produce fruit like the tree which furnished the buds.

Radio Waves and Ripples

REALIZING perfectly the futility of attempting to tell anyone how to impress the judges of Columbia's find-a leading-lady-for-Dick Powell contest as to win a $250-a-week contract—if we knew we'd let hair grow and win it ourself, you dope—we nevertheless print herewith an abridged version of a how-to-behave-in-a-radio-audition guide prepared by Courtenay Savage, C. B. S. dramatic director.

Here it is:

1. Take it easy. Avoid tenseness and over-anxiety.
2. Don't chatter nervously with of the other young women who are, like yourself, waiting to be led to the microphone. Pass the time reading over your script.
3. Listen carefully to what the man in charge advises.
4. When you are led to the microphone, take an easy, comfortable balance on your feet. Don't take some strained position which actually influences voice and radio manner.
5. Don't hold your music or script low, and don't look down on it. Hold it directly opposite your eyes so both head and voice will be up.
6. Try, at the moment before audition, to get a good grip on yourself. Relax. Make sure you are breathing easily. Forget the men in the audition room.
7. Deliver your songs and dramatic reading without raising your voice. Enunciate clearly—try to project your personality with one person in mind as a listener.
8. Don't imitate. Be original.
9. In singing, stick to the melody.

SINCE 1926, N. B. C. engineers and researchers have been conducting tests and keeping daily logs and charts of the effectiveness of short-wave transmission between the United States and Europe.

They learned a thing or two, did these engineers and researchers. They learned that satisfactory transatlantic transmission is largely a matter of magnetic disturbances and that by charting periods of rotation to which these disturbances are subject they could plot their probable course. Then, by correlating these charts and other factors—seasons, time of day, wave lengths—these scientific men discovered that they were able to forecast the probable quality of reception at any given future date and hour.

Thus, barring something unpredictable like a chart-defying thunder storm, tomorrow, these men of science tell us, should be a pretty good day for an international broadcast. Happily, it is also the day for the opening program in the first series of commercial programs to come to America via Europe.

The series is being paid for by the sponsors of the Will Rogers programs. It will bring to your armchair tomorrow entertainment by some of England's favorite performers—Gertrude Lawrence, John Tilley, Carroll Gibbons' Orchestra, Danny Malone, Webster Booth and the Prince of Wales' Welsh Guards Choir.

Tomorrow's show comes from the studios of the British Broadcasting Corporation at the time formerly taken by the Rogers programs. Subsequent broadcasts in the series will be transmitted by the radio companies of Berlin, Paris and Vienna.

Philip Coney, a young man from Harvard, will be your master of ceremony on the third edition of WRC's "Washington Airbreaks" tonight at 10, and has a good chance of one day finding his name on the N. B. C. pay roll as announcer for several reasons.

First, he read a piece prepared for him by Violet Wachter on the last Airbreaks show in a manner altogether pleasing to N. B. C.'s production manager, Shannon Allen.

Secondly, he walked into an Airbreaks audition the other night and calmly informed Mr. Allen and sundry other assembled N. B. C. minds that he, Philip Coney, was Heaven's gift to people who want masters of ceremony—and there are people who want masters of ceremony—and a few minutes later was rolling, literally rolling, the aforementioned N. B. C. executives in and out of the studio with burlesqued imitations of Mae West, Rudy Vallee, Jack Benny, &c., conducting radio programs.

And thirdly, he has shown the said N. B. C. minds that as an announcer he is best described as "swell."

OUR brewers are looking to local broadcasting as a medium for telling the customers about the mellow qualities of their beverages in greater numbers than the initial airing of the National Variety Show on WRC last night would indicate.

Columbia and N. B. C. in Washington are indulging in a friendly combat to determine which, if either, shall enrich their treasuries from the advertising budget of another beer company. For the present, the fight's a draw and the beer company is taking things under advisement until September.

In case you may have wondered about the identity of some of the National Variety Show personnel, John Moss is a Washington lad with previous experience as an appendage of George Hall's Orchestra; the Simms Trio hails from Indiana, where it worked with Johnny Johnson's Orchestras, and Lee Timmons and Al Nielson, are . . . well, they're singers, also.

N. B. C.'s contract calls for 52 performances Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights at 6:45 p. m. on WRC and Baltimore's WFBR.

Bird Hatches Offspring On Mail Carrier's Cart

Harrisburg, Ill., July 13 (AP).—A mother bird has hatched and reared two families of offspring in her nest on the rear axle of a one-horse cart owned by Homer Little, mail carrier here.

Protected by Little, the bird sat daily on the nest while the cart jolted a mile to the postoffice and made five daily trips from there to the union depot. After the eggs were hatched, the mother waited at home and brought food to the nestlings when the cart returned.

Self-Help For The Jobless.

A new approach to the relief problem seems to be forecast in the plans for creation of a rehabilitation corporation in the District. While this enterprise will be entirely local in character, the same method is to be applied in other communities with funds supplied by the FERA. The Washington agency is to be operated as a model which other cities may copy.

Costly experiments in both direct relief and creation of relief jobs have been conducted by the FERA. Neither has proved satisfactory. All social workers recognize the demoralizing effect of a system under which food, clothing and money are distributed to destitute families without any effort on their part. Dependence and irresponsibility are thus encouraged, and there is a strong tendency for emergency cases to become permanent relief problems.

On the other hand, when jobs are created at competitive wages, relief expenses mount to extremes, as was shown by the CWA experiment, while much of the work thus performed is of little value. Between these two extremes, some communities have organized self-help agencies with the view of assisting the unemployed to supply as many of their own wants as possible. Work that is immediately useful to the group in need can be thus provided, morale should be strengthened and, if the project is efficiently managed, relief costs may be reduced.

Some theorists advocate reorganization of the economic system on the basis of self-help agencies. It is quite probable that their unsound arguments have delayed application of this plan in the field of unemployment relief. There is a wide difference between stimulation of local enterprises through which the unemployed are aided in supplying themselves with food, shelter and clothing and Government operation of idle factories on a large scale to give work to the unemployed. In the one case destitute families are supervised in a cooperative effort to rehabilitate themselves, and in the other case the Government supplants private interests as a competitive manufacturer.

Vigilance will doubtless be necessary to avoid evolution from the self-help agencies to Government operation of industrial plants. But that should not be difficult if the objectives are clearly defined before such enterprises are undertaken. Certainly any method by which the enormous relief obligations which are being stacked against the taxpayer may be mitigated, and constructive employment created, is worthy of serious consideration.

Limits To National Recovery.

In the first stages of recovery from a prolonged business depression, the upward movement is usually rapid and sustained for a considerable period of time. When there is a great deal of lost ground to be regained, it is possible, furthermore, to achieve a large expansion of domestic business without a corresponding revival of foreign trade.

Country after country appears to have gone through this preliminary stage of recovery, in which the initial pace of advance has aroused illusory hopes of continuous improvement and overconfidence in the nation's economic self-sufficiency. Some time ago, the American people experienced a measure of disillusionment as a result of the check to the upward movement of business and the growing realization that a revival of our export trade is essential to an all around recovery of business activity.

The British, of course, have never been so blind as to believe that a people in their position could prosper without selling and buying abroad. Nevertheless, they have been disposed of late to minimize the extent of their dependence upon foreign trade and the importance of world prosperity to themselves.

The reason for this changed attitude lies largely in the pronounced and well-maintained improvement in domestic business which has been in evidence for over a year and a half. Consequently it is something of a shock for the British to find that the pace of recovery has suddenly halted. The index of business activity of the London Economist, for example, turned downward in May and that authoritative journal now asks anxiously whether this indicates that the forces operating to bring about recovery have worked themselves out and that the country has reached "what for the present must be regarded as a zenith."

One setback does not suffice to afford an answer to the question, especially as conditions in many British industries are flourishing. Housing construction is extremely active and many of the capital goods industries report marked improvement. Shipbuilding, however, and other undertakings that depend for prosperity upon the revival of foreign trade have not shared in this domestic revival.

Until foreign trade revives, it is certain that definite and none too elevated limits to recovery exist, for every nation. That limit may not have been reached everywhere, but the possibility that it may be close at hand is undoubtedly worrying all who look beyond the immediate present.

The General As Lawyer.

Gen. Johnson feels safe from reprimand for his strictures against the present German government because he uttered them as an individual, not as an official of the United States. But he can not expect to be equally immune from correction for another assertion in his Iowa speech. Reference is made to the general's statement that:

> As a lawyer I am very sure that Constitutional rights guaranteed for the benefit of the public can not be signed away.

It must be pointed out to the administrator that this contention will not bear the light of close examination. Only very recently his own legal staff have been arguing, in the Weirton case for instance, that signatories to an NRA code by that action waive their rights to rest an appeal against that code on Constitutional grounds.

That is not all. If Gen. Johnson would take time between speeches to look up precedents he would find, in 271 U. S. 208, a clear-cut Supreme Court decision completely contradicting the contention of which he is so "very sure." The case is that of Booth Fisheries vs. the Wisconsin Industrial Commission, in which a unanimous opinion, written by Chief Justice Taft, was handed down on May 24, 1926.

This case was one in which an employer, having elected a certain method for payment of workmen's compensation, was denied the right of appeal on Constitutional grounds against an award determined by that method, but deemed by the employer excessive. Having elected to accept certain provisions, the court ruled, the employer could not escape their subsequent burdens by raising the Constitutionality issue. His own action had constituted a waiver of this right.

Gen. Johnson admitted, in this speech at Waterloo, that he no longer regards as "pure surplusage" the insistence of the press on inclusion in the newspaper code of a specific safeguard for Constitutional rights. He now sees "more clearly why these gentlemen were apprehensive."

That is some advance, in which it may be hoped that the President shares. But before the General announces that he knows the law on Constitutional rights "backward and forward," he might consult with some of his own skilled lawyers. It is neither good law, nor good politics, to seek to lull public apprehensions over certain phases of the New Deal as inconclusively as the NRA Administrator did in this instance.

A Dangerous Proposal.

Mayor LaGuardia's indignant rejection of the bid of the banking syndicate which offered to take a $72,000,000 bond issue of New York City at a rate averaging 4.03 per cent need not be taken too seriously. From present indications, it looks as if the teapot tempest would subside and a compromise be reached on the basis of a somewhat modified syndicate offer. However, the mayor's hint that he might try to sell city bonds to the RFC, if the bankers fail to meet his terms, indicates a surprising indifference to the serious implications of such a proceeding.

The threat to apply to the RFC for funds is discounted because New York is not in a position to comply with the legal conditions governing such advances. Nevertheless, the suggestion that a Government agency might be employed to force bankers to quote lower rates on municipal issues opens up a vista of lurid possibilities. If the RFC were to make such advances to New York, other cities could properly demand similar accommodation. The Federal Government would no doubt soon find itself financing municipal borrowers on terms unrelated to the extent of the credit risk, as measured by the rate which investors would be willing to pay for municipal issues.

The mayor has produced no evidence to substantiate his charge that the banks "have ganged together to exact money from the city." Although the interest charges on some of the short-term notes are relatively high, the actual cost of borrowing is reflected in the average rate for all issues, which amounts to only 4.03 per cent. On this basis, the credit status of the city does not appear to have been underrated, when tested by the yields on its outstanding obligations. Indeed, judging by the state of investment demand and considering the large size of the bond offering, the syndicate bid seems quite reasonable.

New York City may look enviously upon some municipalities that are able to obtain better terms than it can demand, but that is no excuse for trying to obtain concessions from bankers by resort to denunciations and threatened appeals to a Federal lending agency. To enjoy the benefits of lower interest rates, New York must carry out those fiscal reforms that the mayor has initiated with vigor and with admirable success to date. There is certainly no justification for employing Federal funds to force down borrowing costs for a municipality now paying the price of past political mismanagement.

Sanctuary For Humanity.

Frail, bearded and almost blind, Dr. Axel Munthe, whose "Story of San Michele" has been read by thousands, sat the other day at a London luncheon of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. Several noted speakers hailed him for his pioneer share in making the lovely island of Capri a bird sanctuary. When other bird-lovers, whom Dr. Munthe characterized as "soldiers fighting a holy war," had finished, another frail, bearded man arose. It was George Bernard Shaw, whose life has been given to expressing in witty words the profound platitudes of generations.

He paid his tribute to the safeguarding of feathered life at Capri. And then he lamented the fact that there is no similar sanctuary for human beings.

"Although there are arrangements for shooting them on as large as possible a scale," the Irishman said, "no one has started any protection-for-humans sanctuary, where they can not be shot."

It was an old thought, as most thoughts are, but its repetition was timely. For Shaw knows, as we all know, that it would not take much to turn our contemporary world into a widespread slaughter-house of the innocents. We pass laws protecting wild life, we spend money setting aside safety spots for birds. But no law ever yet passed has made any part of the world a permanent sanctuary for humanity.

On The Other Foot.

With few exceptions, the governments asked by the League of Nations to invoke an arms embargo against Bolivia and Paraguay are finding it very difficult to make up their minds about it. In principle the embargo has been approved by 30 countries. But it is one thing to assume a high moral attitude, and quite another to cut off the profits resulting from the shipment of arms and ammunition to the belligerents. Only the United States, Great Britain and some of her dominions, Switzerland, Holland and Denmark have actually taken steps to make the embargo effective.

Moreover, the British are now concerned over Bolivia's threat of reprisals. Earl Stanhope, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, has informed the House of Lords that Britain will have to reconsider its position unless other countries support the munitions ban. Claiming that the British embargo is a violation of her trade agreement, Bolivia is threatening to impose heavy war taxes on British firms within her borders. Consequently, there is grave danger that the prohibition on arms shipments to the Chaco may be weakened rather than strengthened.

For the most part the history of this effort to deprive the South American belligerents of munitions consists of "passing the buck." According to Lord Stanhope, Italy agreed to forbid the shipment of war materials to the Chaco if Russia and Japan would do likewise. Each country is waiting for the others to act, and some of them are stipulating conditions that would give them temporary advantages in this nefarious trade. In a most important venture, where widespread cooperation is essential for success, the overwhelming majority of governments are haggling over something less than a mess of pottage.

When the United States has been reluctant to commit itself to joint international action, it has been severely criticized abroad. Statesmen of the Old World have accused us of frustrating world-wide cooperation. Here is a case in which the United States has taken a clear-cut lead in an effort to stop a futile and senseless war, and only a handful of League members have followed suit. The largest and most influential one of that group is now considering withdrawal because pressure is being applied by one of the belligerents.

The irony of this situation is particularly acute because of the relatively simple nature of the case at issue. There is no question of taking sides with either belligerent. The problem of identifying an aggressor is not involved. No country is asked to send its young men to stop a foreign war. The governments have simply been asked to prevent their citizens from shipping war materials for continuation of a conflict in which none has any profound interest. And the overwhelming majority have failed to take a positive and constructive stand.

This record ought to be emphasized in Geneva. It puts many governments which have advocated regularized international cooperation in the position of using American aloofness from European affairs as a mere excuse for their failure to translate principle into practice.

Corn And Coot.

The Vicomte de Mauduit, who is something of a bon viveur, is about to publish a book in which he will tell in detail his various experiences in the kitchens of the world. An idea of the material he has collected may be seen from the following story he tells therein:

Before the Volstead act, he says, he was initiated to an original meal. It was called the Kentucky breakfast. And it consisted of a bottle of rye whisky, a steak and a dog.

The dog, of course, was there for the purpose of eating the steak.

Now, far be it from us to doubt the veracity of a Vicomte. Far be it from us to deny the existence of such an overpowering meal. The story is probably quite true; there probably is such a breakfast, and if it is partaken of anywhere, Kentucky must be the place. It reminds us of a favorite story told along Cape Cod, where the coot fly high in the fall.

The coot is a very gamy bird. Its flavor is no whit diminished by the fact that it diets exclusively on fish. It is also reputed to be somewhat tough. There is but one recipe for cooking coot and this is it: First shoot the coot. Then place it upon a plank in a slow oven. Cook same for 24 hours, turning every now and then. The second day you continue this process until dinner time. When dinner time comes you take the bird now thoroughly cooked, from the oven.

Then, of course, you throw the bird away and eat the plank.

Such a story, we admit, is told much better than we have told it when and if the narrator has had one of Vicomte de Mauduit's Kentucky breakfasts. But we are of the opinion that both breakfast and coot are better to hear about than to indulge in as a steady diet.

No one worries much about adverse criticism. He dismisses it with the opinion that the critic doesn't know what he's talking about.

From Frying-Pan to Fire?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Until within the last few years, moving pictures of prize fights were prohibited by law, presumably because of their demoralizing influence upon the younger generation. At the present time exhibitions of wrestling bouts are distributed to newsreels which, for sheer brutality, poor sportsmanship, and utter disregard for the rules of wrestling, make the heretofore forbidden prize-fight pictures seem pastimes for juveniles.

Such exhibitions are made possible only through the patronage and support of a following recruited from every walk of our National life. The distribution of pictures of such exhibitions throughout the world undoubtedly gives a wrong impression of the American people.

Backed by the press, a movement to put wrestling on a more decent basis could be made an issue for the Government to decide. If necessary, certain rules of conduct for westlers could be laid down and enforced by law. At any rate, something should be done to restore our National pastime of wrestling to a respectable plane and save not only that sport but our institutions in general from becoming the laughing stock of the world.

Where to Draw the Line?

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I note where a clothing firm stands accused by the NRA of "chiseling" about $150,000 out of its 4,000 employes. Now the question is, Did the firm chisel because it wanted to chisel, or because it had to? In short, are the NRA wage terms such that, if adhered to, they would throw firms into bankruptcy? Is the firm hard boiled or is Uncle Sam hard boiled?

We are still living under a system that tries to make a profit and avoid a loss. Now, for instance, an inspection of the concern's books might show that even the payment of the lawful wages would have left the company considerably to the good. The company would answer, "Yes, we made money, but next year we might lose more than we make, and so we must have a reserve fund. We want one umbrella handy when it starts to rain."

Nothing is cut and dried. Everything is open to argument—sometimes even the boss man's orders. what a life!

Nemesis for Nimrods.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In all the accounts that I read of the prowess of big game hunters, my sympathies are always with the unfortunate game upon which man, in the name of sport, imposes his cruel will. The two stories in Sunday's Post were no exception. The seal hunt was to me one more horrid chapter of man's savage and relentless pursuit, for his own profit and woman's vanity, of so-called lower animals—in this case creatures gentler than himself, and, so, defenseless against him.

The haunting picture of these poor, harried, frantic creatures, pitifully and vainly trying to protect their families, has sickened one reader to the extent that I shall never again buy or wear a piece of seal or fur of any hunted or trapped animal.

Justification is often attempted that creatures in the wild prey upon one another. Some of them do. And man, who is superior in intelligence and, therefore, should be merciful, is the most predatory of all, preying upon them in innumerable ways and with more deliberate, ingenious and pitiless cruelty.

"Impassioned Outbursts."

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The phrase-baited attack on "Bureaucracy" by Senator Borah impresses me as being picturesque and stirring, but also demagogic in its apparently studied fragmentation and lack of practical relevancy. Such impassioned outbursts are a menace to inescapable evidences of general economic betterment, and to a recovery program based upon principles the soundness and promise of which can not be honestly disputed.

National and world conditions are still much too seriously involved to warrant lapsing into the hoary ballyhoo of predepression partyism. Certain it is that any detailed and clearly workable proposition, made with candid and due regard for all the facts in the great plan for recovery now being executed, might be helpful at this stage. But platitudinous opposition, directed at particular phases of an intricate and critical operation, is merely a dangerous fling at horse-play.

Let us by all means have political "parties"—if we must have them. But it is becoming rather painfully obvious that there is no place in the new order of things for that curious feature of the dead past—the quadrennial political Halloween.

The Trouble With The Better Minds

There is a constant need of new words and phrases to describe implements and situations that did not exist in the days when Addison and Steele were writing pure English, says H. T. Webster in the Forum Magazine. If they could follow a Hollywood cameraman and listen to his responses to his wife's questions on the day's work, they would hear:

"What a day. I cranked over 5,000 feet of raw stock."

"Actually?"

"Yeah. All panchromatic and heavy emulsion. Sprocket holes bad too."

"You'd better crash that kodak. When the last batch came out of the soup it wasn't fit to drum. Are you sure the grips got your gobos right?"

For the benefit of Addison and Steele and more recent laymen, who may possibly know that grips are stagehands, soup is developing fluid, and a drum is the reel on which film is wound, "gobos" should be more carefully explained. Why a black panel screen that shields a camera lens from bright lights should be called a gobo, I dunno, but gobo it is.

"Dubbin" is another word found only in movieland. It's the process by which films are prepared for export to countries speaking another language. The scheme is to synchronize the alien words with the lip movements of American stars—thus making it appear, for example, that Greta Garbo speaks Japanese as well as other languages, including the Scandinavian. It's an intricately technical piece of deception—and "dubbin" is its name, a corruption of "doubling."

The talkies require so many new devices that it's not strange that they create a new language. The "boom," for instance, is a telescopic arm on a rubber-tired carriage which will carry a microphone to any part of the set. It's not a bit like a ship's boom, now, but that's where the word came from originally. "Blimp" is the soundproof box that muffles the noise of the camera. Originally it was a baglike affair resembling a small dirigible. Hence, blimp. It's a verb, too. The cameraman spends his day blimping.

Synchronization is the operation of timing the sound track to the action of the screen. It's much too long a word for daily use, so it becomes "sink." When the adjustment is being made in the laboratory, the picture is in sink.

If there is one fact which is clear about the genesis of such words of slang as worthy of repetition, it is that they are blown off as naturally as lava from lively minds cramped by a limited lexicon when under the pressure of a need for expression. The theater has frequent need of a word for failure, and the cipher of the baseball scoreboards has served its people well. Consequently when stock market prices dropped in 1929 as they had not dropped since 1873, the theater had a word for it, and Variety placed over the news story this headline, "Wall Street Lays an Egg."

It is the strictures of column rules in tabloid newspapers that gave us "love nest" and other crisp phrases. The mass circulation of the tabloids is a forcing bed, guaranteeing a swift growth of their terse and often euphemistic phrases, but the boot-and-shoe trade, the morgue keepers, the delicatessen men, each, I am sure, have a language as little understood by outsiders as if it were Choctaw.

The Hollywood gag men in conference on a comedy which has been revealed as too subtle, determine they must "dumb" it down. That phrase saves time and wearying gestures. And "switcheroo" has value in the State Department as well as in the mouth of gag men.

"We can have him drunk and eating all the cherries out of the cocktails," proposes one gag man.

"No," objects another. "Lloyd did that."

"Oke," says the chief gag man. "We'll pull a switcheroo. We'll use olives instead."

Which may be why it is my private opinion that the quick passing of technocracy as an idea for conducting human affairs as well as a publicity device was due largely to its esoteric vocabulary. In other words, it laid an erg. And I doubt if we'll ever get far with currency stabilization or other international economic adjustments until economists begin abandoning the argot of celestial mathematicians.

The trouble with the better minds is that they don't speak our language.

Well—Why?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just why does the Weather Bureau give a different list of cities' temperatures for the morning and evening papers? Just why do the papers publish the list when half the time, when the reader wants to see how it was back in dear old Oskaloosa, the "make-up man" cuts half the list and runs a "flit" ad? How much temperature does a reader run by this messing up? Why does the Weather Bureau list the temperatures in London, Paris and Bulgaria and leave out Medicine Hat?

'All's Right With the World?'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal critics seem to be enjoying a field day. A host of self-styled economic experts and political wiseacres is outdoing itself.

However, most of us have not forgotten that on March 1, 1933, Uncle Sam was a sick man. He was suffering from a complication of diseases, any one of which might have proved fatal.

The doctor who was treating him had tried all of the time-honored remedies, without avail. The famous patient was sinking rapidly, and the family was summoned to the bedside.

At the last minute another physician was called in. He prescribed different treatment, and immediately applied heroic measures. Result: Uncle Sam is on his feet again. His pulse is stronger, his appetite has returned, and he sleeps better o' nights.

But the wiseacres tell us that it was a mistake; Nature should have been allowed to take its course. Maybe they won't be satisfied until they can attend the obsequies.

Ask the people which they will take—the old deal, with 13,000,000 out of work, the sonorous voice of the auctioneer closing out their homes, banks toppling all over the country, and starvation and panic stalking the land, or the New Deal, with several million of the unemployed now back to work, homes secure, the banks sound, and confidence steadily growing—and you will get the answer.

The Post Impressionist

"English Undefiled."

Postoffice, Saturday.

ANDREW EVANS is angry with us. Recently there appeared on this page, but not in this column, an article headed "Fussy Corrections." It spoke of the common confusion of "shall" and "will," of "who" and "whom," and perhaps it did "turn up its little nose"—a little—at that authority upon "English undefiled," the late Henry Watson Fowler. Anyhow, its writer was demonstrably unacquainted with the equally authentic Jesperson. And now, if you please, the eminent translator of Aresi's journal upbraids us for it!

"If you wrote 'Fussy Corrections,'" he writes, "I implore you to read Jesperson. If you didn't, please induce the person who did to read Jesperson."

* * *

Well, we didn't write "Fussy Corrections." And we can't conveniently persuade its writer to read Jesperson, because "Fussy Corrections" was reprinted from the London Times, and our acquaintance with the editorial staff of that newspaper does not quite warrant our instructing it. However, we don't mind publishing in The Washington Post what Mr. Evans has to say concerning the whole matter.

He has to say this:

"Why not use a noun as an adjective? Why not use any part of speech for any other? It is not the same question as it would be in arithmetic, where to use a 2 to represent a 3 would be contrary to the rules of the game. There are no rules of the language game, except Folkways.

"I am tired of casual people's writing articles in which they begin by upholding some usage accepted by all the people who make the best type of Folkways, and then go on to uphold with great violence some point of diction about which they have a personal feeling, and about which they are almost invariably wrong. To be sure, Fowler was considered a rank outsider by those really inside; but at least he had mostly devoted his life to what he wrote about."

And thus well started, Mr. Evans continues at large:

"In a recent number of The New Yorker, a weekly obviously intended to be comic, there was an article on the clumsiness of English writers when trying to burlesque our use of 'gotten.' I had supposed that that word, obsolescent 40 years ago, had completely obsolesced. No wonder the English make fun of it. That they do so clumsily was to be expected.

"I once asked Louis N. Parker—best known to Americans for his 'Disraeli'—why it is impossible for Englishmen to reproduce American speech. I cited George Birmingham, who made an American girl mention 'the marine promenade at Atlantic City.' Mr. Parker said: 'My mother was an American, I was born in France. The first language I spoke was German. I might consider myself fairly international. But whenever I put an American character into one of my plays I have all his speeches read through and approved, or corrected, by an American friend of mine. I don't believe you will find many mistakes in them.' Mr. Parker is English.

"But to get back to The New Yorker: I wonder if our strange word 'gotta' is not what is being parodied by those English writers of whom it complains. For many of us, 'gotta' typifies all that is debonair and diverting; it is an ugly, but harmless, blemish which, being quite unnecessary—an inexactness in reporting, or a dependence on typographical crutches, just as 'yeh' and 'yu' for 'yes'—will fade away of itself.

* * *

"What it would be good to see made fun of, either by the English or even by The New Yorker, is the locution, or set of locutions, connected with 'do have.' The use of them is spreading like a miasma over the country. Unless my memory errs, the New York Times has more than once descended editorially to this error. Certainly it is common for library attendants, asked for a book, to reply: 'We don't have it today.'

"Yet the rule involved is not involved: it concerns 'have' only when employed in the general sense of 'possess;' and it says that when the idea of possession is specific, 'have' must get along without 'do.' When you are starting to the theater and your wife asks you, 'Have you the tickets?' (or 'Have you got the tickets?'—but not 'Do you have the tickets?'), the correct answer, in case it is true, would be, 'I haven't them' (not 'I don't have them'). On the other hand, when the idea of possession is general, when 'sometimes' may be inserted in the sentence, a correct question would be, 'Do you have tickets to the National Symphony concerts?'—and a correct answer, 'I do, occasionally.' If I ask you, 'Do you have fleas?' it means, 'Are you susceptible to them?' Whereas if I wish to ask you whether you are suffering from fleas, I must say, 'Have you fleas?'

"But this ought not to be a thing learned by rule, and I doubt that it will be learned that way to much purpose, or in many cases. We all should have grown up accustomed to making, by what used to be called 'second nature,' the subtle variations in the use of 'have.' I believe we all did grow up that way. I believe the present wave of error is due to our curious National habit of snapping up new turns of phrase. Somebody hears somebody else say, 'Do you have a headache?' and immediately reflects: 'I never said it that way. I must be wrong. I remember that my school teacher used to object to "got." I must watch myself.' In respect to words and phrases, why have we Americans such an inferiority complex?"

All right, we'll be the goat: Why do we have it?

Luring the Customer.

BARGERON

IT is getting to be perfectly plain as our Government increases its endeavors in behalf of the body weal that there have been a lot of things done to us that we didn't know about. How the Government itself has found these things out is a credit to its ever vigilant eye. Its action marks a departure, too, from any government we have ever had. Heretofore, we have had to suffer wrongs for no end of time until the Government finally intervened. We had to write our Congressmen, write letters to the editor, hold mass meetings, and in other ways make our distress known. Now, however, much of the mistreatment is utterly unknown to us until we read that the Government has moved to have it stopped.

The emergency declared by the NRA in the cigarette business is what brought the matter so strikingly to my attention.

For a period of 90 days now it will be a challenge to the armed forces of our Government for anyone to sell a package of the standard brand of cigarettes for less than 13 cents or two packages for a quarter. It was necessary for the Government to intervene in this matter because it seems that some vendors have been selling cigarettes for less than that but not with a view to accomodating us but with a view to luring us into their stores. Could anything be more sinister than that? Thank goodness our own editor saw the subversive nature of this right along with the NRA, and promptly approved what it did. Between the NRA and our editorial force of molding public opinion it would appear that here is one danger from which the public is to be protected.

You know, ever since the NRA has been established I have heard a lot about the so-called loss-leader menace to trade, the chaos it caused. Any number of merchants we were told made it a practice to sell some articles below cost to entice customers into their stores. It occurred to me then that it was a nefarious thing for the merchants to do to the customers, but as I had never had any personal experience I didn't have any strong feeling about the matter one way or the other.

The enticement, it seems, had mostly all been with the women. In the matter of toilet articles and the like, why it was said that the merchants would advertise soap at a loss just to get the women into the stores.

As I said, it was an impossible condition that I thought should be eliminated, but the danger had not been brought home to me because I seldom buy my own soap.

• • • •

When the NRA comes out now, however, and discloses that this same enticement, this same undermining of people, has been going on in cigarettes, it is speaking something I understand. I realize that I have been enticed without knowing it.

Many is the time—it all comes back to me now—I have seen a sign on the window reading: "Cigarettes today for 12 cents." Then going unsuspectingly into the store what should be my experience—oh, I shudder when I realize what I have been through—what should be my experience but for the counter-jumper to say: "Would you like a nice package of safety razor blades today?" Or, perhaps, he would direct me to the choice library which all our popular cigarette stores maintain, or to the soda fountain, where a book of soda tickets could be obtained.

I don't think it is in point at all that never did I buy any safety razor blades under such circumstances, or partake of the literary pabulum, or avail myself of the opportunity to collect soda tickets. But the danger was there. The seductiveness was unquestionably working on me, slowly and subtly wrapping its tentacles about my shanks. There is no question in my mind now, as I look back on what I have been through—ugh, ugh—that soon or late I would have been steeped in sin.

I hope our editor goes courageously along with the NRA in this gallant crusade.

Zihlman Unlikely To Enter Primary

Two Others Seek G. O. P. Vote in Maryland.

Cumberland, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, of Silver Spring and this city, who has been here since Wednesday meeting political friends, has practically decided not to run for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth District, which he served for a number of years until defeated by the incumbent, David J. Lewis, four years ago.

This leaves the field to former State Senator William A. Gunter, a member of the bar here for 20 years, who announced his candidacy today, and Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, defeated by Mr. Lewis two years ago, who also has announced his entry.

Mr. Gunter, who has been active in Republican politics, is president of the Alleghany County Bar Association and past president of the Cumberland Kiwanis. He was Republican floor leader when a member of the State Senate.

First Summer Terms End.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—The first terms of the summer sessions at the State Teachers College and the Fredericksburg High School were concluded today, with second term classes scheduled to begin Monday morning.

NRA Future Course Held Guessing Matter

GMC Economist Declares All Suggestions Ignored by Recovery Officials; Public Affairs Group Hears Varied Talks on Program.

By Howard Turner.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 13.—Trends in the recovery program were considered at today's session of the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

David Cushman Coyle, member of the reviewing board of the PWA, declared that future paths of the NRA "may be found leading almost anywhere." Where they will finally end is a matter of "hopeful guessing," he said.

Speaking to the round table evaluating work of the NRA, Mr. Coyle asserted that methods employed to end former depressions had failed to cure the present economic illness.

"The main trend of the new deal," he said, "is a gradual education of the American people to a new conception of the nature and mechanism of recovery and of stability."

He viewed investment restrictions of the securities act and the securities market bill and efforts to provide basic economic security through old-age pensions and insurance as hopeful signs of establishing a stable prosperity.

Orderly Progress And Stability Seen.

MR. COYLE concluded that "if the country is able to preserve its patience under distress and its confidence in a leader who knows how to hold his fire until he sees the whites of the enemy's eyes, the prospects of an orderly progress into a future of stable plenty seem to be excellent."

Dr. Leon Henderson, director of research in the NRA, declared there has been a marked increase during the last year in purchasing power of the consumer. He said Government money spent to "prime the pump" was reflected in definite rise of retail sales.

S. M. Dubrul, General Motors Corporation economist, said every NRA mistake was anticipated, and corrections suggested to the Administration were ignored. In view of these conditions, he said, the NRA degenerated into a "horse-trading institution."

Charles M. Kinsolving, of New York, National commander of the American Veterans Association, argued for a more favorable consideration of veteran demands and needs.

Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, told the forum on "Management Versus Regulation in Government" that the slogan "factory-ward ho" must be substituted for the "back to the farm" movement if industrial potentialities are to be translated into higher standards of living.

Dr. Lawrence H. Seltzer, of the Farm Credit Administration, spoke on Federal policies being adopted to stimulate business by increasing the level of activities in construction industries.

Manchukuo Problems Are Discussed.

DR. BEN DORFMAN, of New York, formerly attached to the Lytton Commission, appointed by the League of Nations to make a study of the Manchurian situation, discussed political and economic trends in the new state of Manchukuo before the round table devoted to Far Eastern affairs.

The question of whether the masses are better off under the new government defies answer, he declared.

"The present Manchukuo administration," he added, "is undoubtedly more technically efficient than was its predecessor, and many of its reforms are commendable achievements."

He pointed out that economic prospects of the masses "are certainly no worse," though the "legitimate opportunities of the upper-strata Chinese have been considerably lessened."

In speaking of the attitude of the Chinese south of the Great Wall, Dr. Dorfman asserted that "September 18, 1931, for many years to come will be observed by increasing numbers of Chinese as a 'humiliation,' which must be avenged.

"Many Chinese," he added, "will continue to regard financing bandit activities in the lost province a patriotic act, preserving a tension sufficiently high that any incident, genuine or manufactured, may set off another conflagration in the Far East."

Grover Clark, of New York, leader of the forum, discussed the significance of the decision of the United States to grant eventual independence to the Philippines. Concern, he declared, is felt in China over possibility of Japan extending her island empire across China's "front door" by taking possession of the Philippines.

Japanese Tokyo Problem Is Aired.

SOME Japanese assert, Mr. Clark said, that Tokyo is not likely to entertain any political ambitions in the Philippines, but it could hardly stand idle if some other nation began political activity there.

Speaking before the round table on "Protestant-Catholic-Jewish Relationships in America," Walter J. Conaty, Richmond attorney, declared that religious orders are apt to play into the hands of designing politicians who are always on the alert to fan the flames of racial and religious prejudice.

Discussing the religious aspects of the 1928 Presidential campaign, he asserted that "if Alfred E. Smith had been elected, he would not have been a Catholic President any more than he was a Catholic Governor of New York. He would have been an American President."

Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, director of education in the Tennessee Valley Authority, outlined the program of practical adult education being carried on in the Tennessee Valley region.

Workers on Government projects, he said, are being trained in useful vocations, including agriculture and the various trades. It was pointed out that men were being trained for projects now under construction and were being prepared to become leaders in the future industrial communities.

Dr. Reeves expressed the hope "that if the experiment in education for life in rural-industrial communities under the TVA is successful, it will be adopted in other places."

Y Leader Lauds Film Crusade

Spiritual Activities Director Gives Support in Letter to Press.

Baltimore, July 13 (Spl.).—Dr. George T. Harvey, director of spiritual activities of the Young Men's Christian Association here, today commended the fight of the Catholic Church against allegedly indecent motion pictures.

In a letter to the Catholic Review, weekly archdiocesan newspaper, Dr. Harvey wrote:

"I wish to commend the salutary action of your church in its splendid action on the questionable movies.

"My hope is that all religious groups will follow it up, that our young people may not have a distorted vision of life."

During the absence of Archbishop Michael F. Curley in Ireland, the Catholic Church's campaign against indecent movies in the Baltimore archdiocese is being carried on by priests and students in the parochial schools.

Catholics to Honor Cardinal Gibbons

Baltimore Residents to Pay Tribute July 22.

Baltimore, July 13 (Spl.).—Tribute to the memory of Cardinal Gibbons, prelate of the Baltimore archdiocese, will be paid by Catholics of Baltimore, July 22, it was announced today.

The celebration will come one day before the one-hundredth birthday anniversary of the cardinal, who was born July 23, 1834, in Baltimore.

Mass will be said at 8 a. m., at the cathedral, by the Right Rev. John McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore. The crypt in the cathedral, in which the cardinal is buried, will be open on both July 22 and 23. The Knights of Columbus will place a wreath on the tomb.

Anti-Superstition Club Hits Jinx Day

Wheeling, W. Va., July 13 (U.P.).—In a weird shack in the West Virginia hills, Wheeling's Antisuperstition Club met Friday the 13th and solemnly smashed traditional mirror.

The club's mascot this year is Kenneth Wright, colored boy, who celebrated his thirteenth birthday today. There are 13 letters in his name, he lives at 313 Warwood avenue (13 letters), and was born in 1921 (add those four digits).

Milestone Dedicated In West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—West Virginia's zero milestone was dedicated today when Gov. H. G. Kump, Road Commissioner Ernest L. Bailey and John J. D. Preston, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, made brief addresses.

The stone, unveiled weeks ago by a curious passer-by, is on the Kanawha River bank opposite the State capitol entrance. It marks the point from which all highway mileages in the State will be measured.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Beale of the Blues.

BEALE STREET starts on the banks of "Ol' Man River" and cuts for a mile through the heart of Memphis—a packed and jangling thoroughfare, a world of its own, the "Main Street" of the North American Negro. From it came Roscoe Conkling Simmons, picturesque orator and one of the foremost advocates of his race, who rose on a hot June day in Chicago, cried: "And now I am permitted to speak of my captain—with eye and heart I examine him—I watch him on the bridge—I note him most when most the storm is wild," and thus seconded renomination of Hoover in 1932. On Beale street lives and works Robert R. Church, the Negro political boss of western Tennessee, a stanch and honest power in the Republican party.

THEO. HALL

And down Beale street once sauntered a man named Handy, humming a tune. It was a tune that had cousins in the back-country and the sweltering river bottoms, and when Handy got it right in his head and set it down, the "Beale Street Blues" went around the earth to Singapore and Cape Town. About the same time he also fathered an obscure little number to the effect that "my man's got a heart like a rock cast in the sea." You may have heard of it, though. It's known as the "St. Louis Blues."

Such is the street of which one of its leading citizens, George Washington Lee, writes in "Beale Street: Where the Blues Began" (Ballou, $2.50). He knows everybody on it, he knows its whole gorgeous and melodramatic past. And he puts everything down with complete and engaging frankness, and with great natural charm. As a description of a famous little corner of the world and the people who make up its life, the book is priceless.

• • • •

Mr. Lee seems as full of items as a department store. He ranges from the terrible yellow fever epidemic of 1876 (when the population of the town, by death or desertion, suddenly fell from 40,000 to 19,600, and the Negro Zouave regiments did yeoman service) to the futile attempt of the Ku Klux Klan in 1924 to ruin the National Negro Insurance Association (with policies in force of $163,000,000).

Rivaling Herbert Asbury's "Barbary Coast," he draws a lively picture of Beale Street's underworld—the gamblers and dope peddlers, the bullies and barkeeps, the light ladies and those parasitical gentry known as "easy riders."

Here are Birdie Butler, who began as a parson's daughter and ended as queen of Beale's backyard; Lovie Joe, who had a hundred suits, twenty pairs of shoes, and changed his clothes five times a day; Cousin Hog, who bounced the boys from the Monarch Club when they won too much from the house; Peewee, a little Italian four and a half feet high who was so strong that Jack Johnson couldn't bend his arm, and a host of others. Gun fights, murders, and lynchings fill the pages with action.

• • • •

But Mr. Lee makes his book far more than a narrative of such highly-seasoned figures and actions. He is also intent on portraying the solid achievements of the urban Negro.

Up and down Beale street we go while he tells us how this tailor got his start, how that publisher is doing, what this druggist did to earn success. We follow the life stories of A. F. Herndon, who was born a slave and who nursed his life insurance company from assets of $1 to $1,523,000, and of J. C. Claybrook, who was working on a farm for 75 cents a day in 1890 and who now owns a town and forests and is known as "the black diamond of the Arkansas Valley."

On the same street with the honky-tonks and gambling parlors exist first-rate examples of the American business career. Mr. Lee describes them with the pride and gusto of the observant neighbor.

• • • •

A personal friend of both W. C. Handy and R. R. Church, he gives them both a chapter of interesting, though undiluted, praise. Of Handy he tells how a hurriedly composed song called "Mr. Crump" helped elect a gentleman of that name to the mayoralty of Memphis. With the new title of "Memphis Blues," it was turned down by every music publisher in the country until a young white man in town bought it and made a fortune on it. "St. Louis Blues," by the way, was likewise rejected. Not until Handy and his librettist formed their own publishing company did it begin its spectacular rise to fame. The origins of all Handy's songs are discussed in full.

The story of R. R. Church is that of the son of Beale street's old-time boss. Growing up in his father's footsteps, he is a leader and benefactor of his people. But Mr. Lee's story of this career, of its political conflicts and victories, would remain good but undistinguished if it were not for a little picture which he gives us at the end of the chapter, a footnote on the atmosphere of Mr. Church's office:

"No one can help but be amused by the ludicrous antics of Wade and Wilson, his two office men. These two are always warring with each other over various and sundry trifles. Each is determined to know more than the other about everything that happens, and when one of them displays his knowledge, the other invariably gets fighting mad; rough words are passed, dire things are threatened, but the fracas always ends in a love-feast when they hear the approach of the 'boss' from the rear of the building."

On such a happy and zestful note of character-painting, I'll rest my case for Mr. Lee and "Beale Street."

Ball and Chains Ordered in W. Va.

Richwood, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Town officials have ordered the ball and chain for offenders who are unable to pay fines. Shackled delinquents will be worked on town streets until fines have been worked out.

West Virginia Plans Survey of Traffic

Huntington, W. Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Addressing the Huntington Chamber of Commerce Ernest L. Bailey, State road commissioner, declared a State-wide traffic and economic information survey for a secondary road construction program will be undertaken next winter.

Bailey said:

"It is my belief that the traffic and economic survey will enable the State road commission to evolve a secondary road program in which there is equitable distribution of funds throughout the different counties of the State by which no community will be either favored or neglected."

Milk Authority Extended.

Richmond, Va., July 13 (AP).—The State Milk Commission decided, after a hearing today, to extend its authority to the Newport News area. Evidence was submitted to the commissioners that prices to producers were below production costs.

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

The War by Death Beam.

Dr. Nikola Tesla has perfected a death ray capable of killing an army at 200 miles. The next war will evidently be just a job for a good electrician.

• • • •

But imagine a famous victory being gummed up by battery trouble!

• • • •

Famous slogans and war cries will need revising. "We have met the enemy and he has been wired for sound!" "Don't give up the beam!" "I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all the juice in the power houses!" "One if by C and two if by B batteries!"

• • • •

"Don't press the button until you see the whites of their eyes!" "Damn the insulated uniforms, throw the switch!" My right is hard pressed, my left is weakened, my center is being worn down; I shall ask for more current!"

• • • •

Fancy the situation in the event of an invasion. A neighbor calls up and says, "A foreign foe has landed on our soil."

"Not really!" you exclaim.

"Yes sir, and it's a big force."

"Well, you'd better call up Washington and notify the Electric Department."

• • • •

"Hello, is this Washington? Well, a foreign army has just landed and I thought you'd like to know."

"An army landed on American soil! Didn't it see those signs?"

"What signs?"

" 'Danger. 100,000 volts.' "

"Oh, it saw the signs all right, but it isn't afraid."

"Why not?"

"Shock troops!"

• • • •

"Is that so? Well, we'll show 'em watts watt."

"It will be a costly war. Have you plenty of dough?"

"No, but we've got plenty of ray."

• • • •

"By the way, we'll need a good theme song for this war."

"Oh, that's all right. The War Department has one. It was written by the General Electric Co."

"What's the name of it?"

"Amps, amps, amps, the boys are marching!"

Glutton for Punishment.

Mr. Fletcher says the G. O. P. will have a brain trust. Isn't the Republican headache big enough, Henry?"

Gen. Johnson admits he has urged the President to name a commission to direct and handle the NRA codes. The General has at last found a puzzle too big for one man.

Apropos of that Tesla death ray, those who volunteer on our side will be fighting for their ohmland.

Postmaster Farley has issued a special stamp for duck hunters. If anybody deserves 'em it's the fellow who can carve one.

Elmer Twitchell was observed at a New York race track with a black patch over one eye. Asked what was the matter, he replied: "Nothing." With one eye covered, the prices will look bigger, that's all."

Survey of Airports Planned in Virginia

Richmond, July 13 (AP).—The executive committee of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce yesterday announced the appointment of a special advisory committee on aviation to "survey the progress which has been made in providing aviation facilities in Virginia and to devise ways and means of procuring for Virginia one of the seven major National air concentrating fields proposed by John J. McSwain."

McSwain is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives. His plan proposes an appropriation of $70,000,000.

Jewelers to Meet At Petersburg

Petersburg, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Plans for the convention of the Virginia retail jewelers in this city July 22 and 23 have been completed. The convention will bring to Petersburg several hundred jewelers.

Entertainment will include a luncheon July 22, followed by a tour of the Petersburg National Military Park. An informal get-together meeting will be held that night, business sessions will be held Monday morning, July 23, and in the afternoon a bridge luncheon is scheduled for women attending the convention. Later a barbecue will be given for the visitors at Indian Swamp.

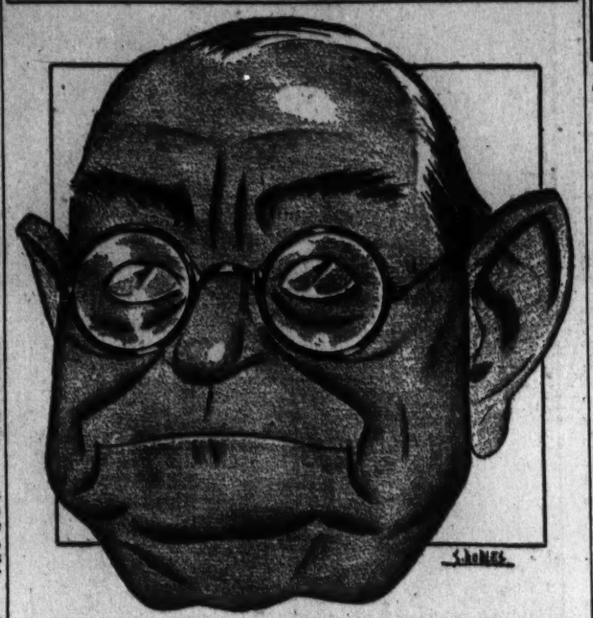
M. R. D. Brown, of Danville, is the State president of the organization, and Charles F. Lauterback, of this city, is in charge of preparations. Mark E. Holt, also of Petersburg, is chairman of entertainment.

Nice Raps Road Body In Speech at Crisfield

Crisfield, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Before a large crowd at a mass meeting in Lyric Theater last night, Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for Governor of Maryland, launched his campaign in Somerset County. Mr. Nice was introduced by Kirk Maddrix, Crisfield attorney, who acted as chairman of the mass meeting.

Mr. Nice declared that if he is elected Governor of Maryland, his first act would be to order an audit of State accounts, and he drew attention to the workings of the State Roads Commission as unsatisfactory.

The National Gallery



GEORGE ROOSA JAMES, member, Federal Reserve Board. He knew Memphis cotton region, had fun banks, sold dry goods, farmed and built wagons. President Harding appointed him to Federal Reserve because he had revived "busted businesses." Financial credit, he believes, is most effective in small doses. Speaks soft, slow drawl punctuated with Southern colloquialisms. Tall, begoggled, hulking frame, he wears store clothes. Likes "bein' out of doors."

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Virginia Booms 4 Candidates For Governor

Price, Brown, Ozlin and Burch Mentioned for Peery's Office.

Richmond, July 13 (Spl.).—Prospective candidates for Governor to succeed George C. Peery in 1936 now include James H. Price, of Richmond, lieutenant-governor; J. Sinclair Brown, of Roanoke County, speaker of the House for three terms; Thomas W. Ozlin, of Lunenburg, member of the corporation commission and former speaker, and Thomas G. Burch, of Martinsville, Congressman from the Fifth District.

All four of these men are being put before the public by large blocs of supporters and it is possible that at least three of them will be candidates in the Democratic primary of 1937.

South Favors Its Own.

Possibilities in addition to the present big four include several members of the political younger generation. Among these are two Richmonders, John J. Wicker, jr., of the State Senate, and Dave E. Satterfield, jr., former Commonwealth's attorney of Richmond, who managed the Peery campaign in 1933. A third younger statesman in the limelight is William M. Tuck, of Halifax, a State senator of wide experience in legislative and general politics, and still another is John Galleher, of Leesburg, chieftain of about 25,000 Young Democrats of Virginia.

Probably the most decided trend in the coming fight will be a drive by southern Virginia to put a son in the executive mansion. Repretative Burch appears to be the favorite of the largest and best organized southern group at this time, but friends of Mr. Ozlin and Senator Tuck are making noise.

No Chance Without Byrd.

It is generally conceded, however, that Speaker Brown, of Salem, just beyond Roanoke, would start a campaign with the most ready-made votes. He lives squarely on the political divide between the valley, southwest and south.

Widespread reports that a "Roosevelt candidate" may appear to cross swords with Senator Harry F. Byrd in the Congressional election this fall, today had no further confirmation than the announcement of John L. Litts, of the Coeburg neighborhood, that he would run. Mr. Litts is a Roosevelt Republican, who served a term in the House of Delegates in 1910-12 and served two terms as Mayor of Coeburn.

Political leaders today said that no Roosevelt Republican or Roosevelt Democrat would have a chance against Mr. Byrd unless Mr. Roosevelt wanted to back a candidate against the incumbent. This was considered an improbability.

Accounting System Installed for Judges

Fredericksburg, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Installation of a new accounting system for the newly-created trial justice system has been completed in accordance with a recent enactment of the State Assembly, Circuit court Judge Frederick W. Coleman said today.

The new records consist of separate sets of books for criminal, juvenile and domestic and civil cases. Trial justices are required to balance the accounts daily and make monthly reports to the clerk of the circuit court.

Constitution Junior Calls at Portsmouth With 5 D. C. Scouts

Portsmouth, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—The world's smallest full-rigged sailing vessel, the Constitution Junior, which on the exterior also is a replica of the famed U. S. S. Constitution, is at the Navy Yard here to remain through Sunday.

Chief Boatswain's Mate James Callan, U. S. N., retired, skipper of the craft, brought her here yesterday after a leisurely trip from Washington, the Constitution Junior's home port. Aboard her were five Washington Sea Scouts whom Capt. Callan is taking on a 16-day jaunt which next week will take them up the James River to Richmond.

The craft is 47 feet long and has a speed of six knots.

Col. Woodcock Not in Judge Race

College President Nears Age Limit of Courts.

Baltimore, July 13 (Spl.).—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock's duties as president of St. John's College at Annapolis will make it impossible for him to run for chief judge of the First Judicial Circuit, comprising the four lower counties of the Eastern Shore, he announced today.

Last week he issued a statement saying he was seriously considering entry into the judgeship race. His decision not to enter the race will make it impossible for him ever to be a judge, for he will be 66 in 1939, when a judgeship next becomes vacant.

Since the retirement age of judges is 70 years, he could not run for a term that could last only four years.

7 More Candidates In St. Marys County

Leonardtown, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—Three Republicans and four Democrats have added their announcements to the list of candidates wishing to run for nomination on the tickets to be voted on in St. Marys County primaries to be held here in September.

They are: Republican—For county commissioner, Anthony Frank, of Beachville; county commissioner, Charles W. Bowles, of Third District; sheriff, Milton C. Joy, Hollywood.

Democrat—For State's attorney, John H. T. Briscoe, Leonardtown; county commissioner, William Wise, Third District; county commissioner, Clarence Bradburn, Scotland; sheriff, John F. Bean, Ridge.

Caroline County Tax Rate Raised

Denton, Md., July 13 (Spl.).—With the board of county commissioners having set the tax rate at 98 cents on $100, a 25 per cent jump in taxes has resulted in Caroline County as compared with Eastern Shore counties.

This in spite of the fact that the levy list is lower this year than last by $20,000. With the State tax rate set at 22 cents, the total rate for Caroline taxpayers will be $1.20 on $100.

It is said the increase is due principally to the decline of $339,000 in the taxable basis of the county.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Fourteenth of July.

On July 14, 1789, a crowd in Paris made its way to the fortress prison called the Bastille, and there they asked the governor, De Launay, to supply them with weapons. He, naturally, refused. The people, already filled with the spirit of revolt, especially hated this building, as it was a symbol to them of irresponsible and arbitrary tyranny; the king having placed people in prison there without trial. It seemed impossible that the mob could capture it, for its walls were 10 feet thick, and they stood high above the street. But while they were arguing with the governor, a section of the crowd streamed across the drawbridge. Here, the royal guards made a fearful error, and nobody has ever been able to find out if any order to fire had been given, or who it was who gave it. The guards fired on the crowd, and killed nearly a hundred.

Outside the mob became so wild that the garrison were smitten with terror, and forced the governor to surrender on condition that they should be allowed to depart without injury. The vast crowd rushed in with shouts of joy. They found only seven prisoners, whom they treated as heroes. The most violent element in the mob became uncontrollable; they butchered all the Swiss guards and also the governor, and carried their heads around the streets, held aloft on pikes, in a triumphal procession.

The fall of the Bastille was a definite, concrete thing; it symbolized, as perhaps nothing else could have done, the power of the people, and it marked forever the end of royal absolute power in France.

The site of the building, at the Place of the Bastille, is now marked by a tall column in bronze. But although this is called the Column of July, it does not commemorate the fall of the Bastille in July, 1789, but is a monument to the revolutionists who were killed in street fighting, in July, 1830, when King Charles X was driven from the throne.

The stones of the Bastille walls had been used for bridges and other public works; but when a few years ago, excavations were made for the subway, the workmen came upon the foundations of the ancient Bastille, and the stones were used for the walls of a station.

On every July 14 there are public games and fireworks and dancing in the streets all night; I can remember lying in bed in Paris and hearing the eternal shuffling of shoes on the asphalt. On July 14, 1913, I was in the ancient city of Nimes, in southern France; there, in a stadium built by the Romans and still regularly used, I saw a mock bull-fight (no animal was hurt) in the presence of a gay throng of 20,000 French people.

State Banking Head Gives Holiday Data

Richmond, July 13 (AP).—Reporting on the 1933 banking crisis, M. E. Bristow, State commissioner of insurance and banking, said today that 92 Virginia banks were either suspended, restricted or allowed to reopen with restrictions after the "holiday" of March 4.

Six of the 29 went into receiverships. Eight reopened and eleven were still under restriction or suspension at the end of 1933, Bristow's report said. Despite the opening of five new banks during 1933 the total number in the State dropped from 238 to 203.

Assets tied up in the six receiverships total $24,868,324, the American Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond heading the list, with $20,422,190 involved.

Elite Adopt Swimming Party Motif

Informal Groups Gather at Private Pools for Diversion.

Summer Heat Dictates Current Mode in Entertaining.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The best that most of those who are obliged to stay in town during the summer months can do to keep cool is to frequent the swimming pools of the various clubs and hotels, or on week-ends, visit one or another of the nearby beaches. But there are a few who have the good fortune to own pools of their own, either at their homes in town or in the suburbs, and these chosen few are most generous in asking their friends to share the delights of swimming, where they are not disturbed by strangers.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill have a beautiful pool in the garden of their home on Belmont road. Mrs. Merrill and their children have gone to their summer home, Avalon, at Prides Crossing, Mass., but Mr. Merrill remains at his duties in the State Department, and entertains almost every afternoon for groups of friends, many of whom are his colleagues in the department, remaining in town while their families have taken themselves to cooler spots.

The pool at the British Embassy is used by the secretaries of Embassy and some of their friends.

Closed Rendezvous.

Many Washingtonians will remember gratefully the hospitality of the late Mrs. John B. Henderson, whose home, the well-known Henderson Castle at Sixteenth street and Florida avenue, was a rendezvous for the younger smart set of the Capital. The place has been closed since the death of that lady several years ago, the pool where once the members of the younger diplomatic circle gathered daily is dry, and the great iron gate to the sacrosanct premises is barred, but the memory still remains of days when one could be sure of no intrusion by those outside the gay little group who "belonged" to Mrs. Henderson.

Many an afternoon was spent playing tennis, swimming in the pool, and afterward having tea with the delightful hostess on the high terraces above the streets. Even when Mrs. Henderson left town to spend the summer in Bar Harbor, members of the group who frequented her pool and gardens were permitted to enjoy them. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Wholean, the latter a granddaughter of Mrs. Henderson, now occupy the Bar Harbor home, Sunny Knoll.

Mrs. Anne Archbold has a spacious pool in the grounds of her home on Reservoir road, where the young friends of her sons and daughters gather when Mrs. Archbold is in residence.

Bachelor House.

At present she and her younger daughter, Miss Moira Archbold are away, and her two sons, Mr. John and Mr. Armar Archbold, are keeping bachelor house. The elder daughter, Mrs. Elliott Strauss, formerly Miss Lydia Archbold, is living in Newport, where her husband, Lieut. Strauss, is stationed.

Col. and Mrs. Arthur O'Brien have a pool at Esta Brook, their estate on the Broad Branch road, which has not been filled this season, as Col. and Mrs. O'Brien only recently returned from a trip around the world. Mrs. O'Brien is still in New York, and probably will visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Hagner, at Nantucket before joining Col. O'Brien here.

Until two weeks ago many guests enjoyed the pool at Arbremont, the Rock Creek Park estate of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, but now the Erwins have departed with their two young daughters and their small son for Mackinac Island, Mich., for the remainder of the summer. The Erwin pool is one of the loveliest in town, far down at the end of the formal gardens, hidden by tall blue spruce trees and bordered with rhododendrons. Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett, mother of Mrs. Erwin, swims there every day in the spring and fall with her small grandchildren. Mrs. Blodgett is also at her summer home on Mackinac Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Adair, who also have a summer home at Fishers Island, have opened their place, and with their children, Peggy, Douglas, and Herbert, jr., Mrs. Adair is established for the summer. Mr. Adair spends frequent week-ends with his family, and later in the season Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Snow will accompany Mr. Adair to Fishers Island to spend a week-end.

A Difficult Guess.

It is sometimes possible for a Contract player to so camouflage the fact that he has a loser in his hand that an opponent has no alternative but to make a sheer guess. No matter how accurate one may be in drawing inferences from the bidding, the inferences drawn may be inaccurate because the basis of them was not fact but simply cheery optimism

Mr. George C. Engel, of New York, sent me the hand below, in which he held the South cards and fulfilled a Grand Slam contract simply because his opponents at the end faced a guess as to which card to hold, and the guess actually made, though it appeared to have the soundest foundation in the bidding, proved to be a losing one.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 6 ♡ K Q 9 2 ◇ J 10 7 ♣ 9 7 3
♠ 9 5 4 ♡ A J 8 3 ◇ K Q 6 5 ♣ 8 4	N W E S	♠ 10 3 2 ♡ 10 7 6 5 4 ◇ 8 4 3 2 ♣ J
	♠ A K Q 7 ♡ — ◇ A 9 ♣ A K Q 10 6 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
7♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

As Mr. Engel remarks, his bidding was optimistic in view of the fact that while his partner's response was positive, it did not necessarily indicate the Ace, and in addition to that, he might need a break in the spade suit to assure the making of a Grand Slam. Thus the chances of a successful Grand Slam were not even.

West could have saved himself a great deal of trouble by opening the heart Ace against the Slam bid, inasmuch as the Fates had decided that he would fail to defeat the contract in any case. His second choice of a lead, the diamond King, would also perhaps have tended to clarify matters as East could later have discarded all his hearts and thus let West read the distribution. Instead, however, West elected to open a trump, and Mr. Engel proceeded to take eleven tricks, the last two cards in his hand being the nine of diamonds and one trump. The last trump was led at the twelfth trick, and now West, faced with a difficult guess, guessed wrong, discarding the diamond King, and the diamond nine won the Grand Slam trick.

The illustration of the pseudo-squeeze is interesting but West's play from the start was bad, and so was East's, for even after West's mistake in the choice of an Opening lead, East should have helped him to the extent of disclosing exactly what the heart situation was. The Double, of course, was a factor in prompting the Declarer to attempt the pseudo-squeeze rather than hope to find the heart Ace in the East hand. It was obvious to South that this play must lose after West had doubled, and the only alternative was the pseudo-squeeze.

Anti-Jazz School Regime Is Probed

Protest Made to Governor of Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., July 13 (AP).—Gov. Futrell was confronted today with a new attack upon the "anti-jazz" administration of Frank R. Horsfall, president of Monticello A. & M. College.

State Senator A. J. Johnson was named yesterday by the Governor to investigate charges contained in a petition signed by 1,000 residents of the district served by the institution.

Criticizing board members for their exoneration of the school president after he had been charged by students with administrative mismanagement and with making "crude allusions to sex problems" in chapel talks, the petition charged the board had given "dictatorial powers" to Horsfall.

Celebration of Bastille Day Opens in France

Paris, July 13 (AP).—Dancing began in festooned streets throughout France today, unhampered by Friday, the 13th, complications and occasional showers, in the annual three-day celebration of the fall of the Bastille.

Bands played in every village square. Military reviews, fireworks and dedications of war monuments comprise official observances tomorrow, while people will continue their dancing until Sunday night.

By Malvina Lindsay,

NOW that the movie clean-up threatens the popularity of the Mae West school of heroines, why not give the good woman another chance?

It is true she had it once and the world was surfeited with Elsie Dinsmores. But because the public tired of sentimentalized virtue was no sign it wanted sentimentalized vice crammed down its throat.

During the last few years it has been almost impossible to enter the world of make-believe without encountering on every hand the "bad gal with a heart of gold." In novels, plays and movies she has been exploited as widely and as gushingly as was the mustachioed libertine in an earlier era. Beginning as a misunderstood sinner, she advanced to a splendid, courageous defier of convention, and finally was graduated into a blatant Delilah, whose heart was so big that she tossed pennies to street beggars and gave succor to starving girls and indigent old ladies.

* * * *

EVERYBODY is familiar with the pattern of the current triangle: The good woman, cold, thin-lipped, Pharisaical, either a bigoted Baptist or a supercilious member of upper class bridge circles.

The man, stalwart, mushy, and of course a disciple of the obvious.

Then—big-hearted Jezebel, under whose ermine, or perhaps rabbit, coat beats a generous heart, behind whose ribaldry dwells a soul of decency, honor, loyalty, integrity, &c.

Of course, the role of the wayward heroine has varied. Sometimes she has been a "game kid," again the "woman who understands," still again the crushed butterfly. But always, if her character is drawn by man (and it usually is) she is shown in subtle juxtaposition to the modern feminine villain—the good woman.

This laudation of the demi-monde has been partly a reaction from the saccharine females that peopled the earlier books and plays. But it has been more directly traceable to the 1920's revolt against Mrs. Grundy. And this revolt was really a rebellion against the mother-knows-best movement, which starting in the women's reform crusades of the 70's, reached its climax in the first two decades of the present century.

* * * *

"DOWN with the old lady from Dubuque" has been the popular cry, and although the old lady is pretty well in a state of coma, many novelists and playwrights are still thumbing their noses at her. This is an adolescent gesture. And equally juvenile is the widespread concern with the woman of easy virtue, who throughout the ages has been the subject of more first effusions of literary youths than probably any other one theme.

Now, however, her sentimental escapades have become as tiresome as Elsie Dinsmore's pious spoutings. And even more tiresome have become the caricatures of the ordinary woman who meets life unsurrounded by the glamour of vice.

Women generally are wearied of the idea that feminine generosity and unselfishness are found only in company with wantonness, that high courage and gallantry can not be associated with discriminating living. They are fed up with the idea that a good, or at least a moderately good, woman can not be interesting. But most of all they are bored with the casting of characters in the melodrama. They feel that for the sake of variety it is time to demand a change of villain, that the good woman deserves a new, if not a better role.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I thought I was in love with a man and half promised to marry him. Now, suddenly, he has to take a job such a long distance away that we practically can not see each other again, unless I marry him and go along, and I can't bring myself to do that. I want him to go, and I told him I would write to him often and after a while we can see how we feel.

He says: "Nothing doing. No halfway measures. You marry me or we make a clean break." He says if we write, our letters will begin to mean less and less, that we'll have misunderstandings and end up in a fight anyway. That it has to be a clean break if I won't marry him.

This seems unreasonable to me, but at least I am willing to submit to an impartial judge and take your opinion into consideration. Will you please let me know what you think? ANNA. J.

* * * *

DEAR ANNA J.: I think two things; first, that you're not one iota in love with this man; and, secondly, that a clean break represents the minimum of justice to both of you.

The man shows admirable character in demanding marriage or an end to dalliance. He probably realizes you've been more intrigued with him as an escort than as a possible husband and that the sooner he diverts his affections into more responsible channels the better for him.

Thinks Man Right.

I certainly should not advocate your marrying him, feeling as you do. Real love never makes its pangs more manifest than when the suggestion of long separation intrudes on the scene. The fact that you are willing to see him go is indisputable evidence that he is not significant in your life.

I think he's entirely right in putting the ban on an exchange of letters. If you don't care enough for him to become his wife and share his fortunes in a new environment, he's wreaking no hardship on you to cut things off short. It will be easier for him to forget you if he doesn't engage in the emotional outpouring which letter-writing invites.

And the time he might spend in watching The Post for a letter from you, he can better devote to cultivating some more responsive vis-a-vis. M. H.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

PLENTY of room at the top. That's what women golfers demand of clothes they wear on the links. While the game is the thing, Washington players declare it pays to give some attention to the costume, since a smashing drive and a talent for putting aren't much good if tight-fitting blouse and skimpy skirt hamper free play.

Players who have a habit of dragging cups home after tournaments laughingly say they don't care how they look, they just want to wear clothes that don't get in their way while playing. But these women either have a strong subconscious style sense, or they are gently fibbing, because they manage to look smart though sportsmanlike on the golf course.

Miss Virginia Pope, who tees off at the Kenwood Club, should get most of the credit if shorts become popular among championship players.

"None of the other women at Kenwood have been wearing them, but I gave them a try last week and liked them fine," said Miss Pope yesterday. Now that the first pair of knees has been bared, others are likely to be exposed, believes the young golfer.

Miss Pope's shorts costume is different from the usual blouse and panty affair. Hers is made in one piece, has no sleeves, is cut low in back. The material is a cool green and white cotton.

Before she tried this practical and brief costume, Kenwood's prize young woman golfer wore sun-back pique dresses in all white or in blue and white. She has also gone swinging down the links in one and two-piece seersucker frocks but these are always sleeveless.

"I've found even a tiny cap sleeve bothers me in playing," said Miss Pope. "It's the same way with a hat. I don't wear any. Dark glasses? No. The sun doesn't seem to hurt me. I play bareheaded all summer long."

Another young player who scorns any type of headgear on the golf course in summer is Miss Helen Dettweiler, Congressional Club's pride among the "baby" niblick wielders.

"A hat annoys me," was the reason she gave for going bareheaded no matter how hot the sun.

Blue Seersucker.

Since blue is Miss Dettweiler's favorite color, she selects most of her golfing clothes in that color. She has found two-piece seersucker frocks, consisting of long-tailed blouse and skirt with pleat in front and back, are the best for keeping one's score down. The blouses have short, pleated sleeves and an inverted pleat down the center back so there is plenty of room for a walloping swing at the ball.

Socks with white or brown golf shoes complete the costume.

It's all right for young golfers to play without hats if they want to, agree Mrs. Donald Scott, Mrs. H. E. Ketner and Miss Elizabeth Harris. But these three don't want to. They insist upon having some sort of protection for their eyes.

"A two-inch brim is sufficient," said Mrs. Scott, who does most of her playing at Indian Spring Club. "And I always wear white linen hats because they're coolest."

Mrs. Ketner usually covers her head with white felt vagabonds. A white flannel skirt with pleats in the front, a striped wash silk blouse with brief sleeves and mannish collar, and black and white golf shoes are worn with the white felt hat.

Mrs. Scott's golf dresses are custom made. They're invariably of seersucker and have pockets for tees, hankie and other doodads. Some of the frocks are two-piece. Some are one-piece. All have short sleeves with pleats on top, action-back bodices and straight skirts with kick pleats front and back.

"I dress them up a bit with buttons," she said. "For instance, here's a blue seersucker dress with tube-like buttons of very dark blue. Then here's this brown and yellow checked seersucker with brown buttons."

Shoes Most Important.

More important than the dress are the shoes when 36 holes are in the offing, Mrs. Scott has learned. She wears a shoe that has no seams underneath so that it fits the foot smoothly like a moccasin. Brushed wool socks are worn with these tan and white shoes.

Miss Harris, president of the Women's District Golf Association, always wears two-piece seersucker dresses on the links in summer. She runs true to form by having a pleat here and there to give her room for an easy stride, for a powerful drive.

"And I must have pockets," she said yesterday. "Three of them are a part of every one of my dresses. Then I can carry tees, cigarettes, and matches or a lighter. Oh yes, and a score card."

Miss Harris wears socks. She also wear silk stockings. Both are worn at the same time.

"I like the feel of silk next my skin and yet silk stockings aren't strong enough to go 'round the course by themselves. So I reinforce them with socks. It works beautifully."

Necklaces or No?

QUESTION: My friends tell me I should never wear beads and necklaces because I have an extremely short, thick neck. But it seems to me some necklaces make it look a little longer. Besides, I have several costumes that do not look well without some jewelry. What do you think I should do?

ANSWER: A woman with a short thick neck should never wear chokers or short strands of beads. But medium-length necklaces, especially those with heavy pendants that pull them into V shapes, are often becoming. Large beads should not be used. The necklaces should consist of medium-sized chains or rather small, dull beads.

To Lengthen Legs.

QUESTION: Can I do anything to make my legs appear longer? In proportion to my height they are too short and I am self-conscious about them, especially in street or sports clothes.

ANSWER: Always wear dresses that are built on long lines. Try to avoid belts or sashes at the waistline. Empire or Directoire cuts make the lower part of the body look longer. So do princess styles. When none of these is in fashion, see that your dresses and coats are as plain as possible below the waist, concentrating all trimming on the bodice or shoulders. Wear your skirts as long as current styles permit. And never miss a chance to don high heels for anything less than a game of tennis.

Questions dealing with dress problems are answered in the Saturday issue of The Post. Address inquiries to Virginia Lee Warren, The Washington Post.

Today's Youth May Influence Social Change

"Lost Generation" Does Not Deserve Platitudes, a Professor Says.

CYNICAL, disillusioned, feeling it has been cheated and kidded about life, the present "lost generation," may some day be the motivating force in an era of drastic social change.

That is the conclusion Dr. Mitchell Dreese, associate professor of education at George Washington University, has arrived at after consulting with hundreds of students and graduates.

"Students who were graduated during the last four years, and who started out confident of bucking the world, now return at the end of a long period of job hunting and discouragement and express most unorthodox views about government," Dr. Dreese, a prominent participant in the recent conference on vocational guidance at George Washington University, said yesterday.

"Those who guide the youth of today should teach them the facts," he continued. "They should not hand out the old platitudes, or feed them the formulas for success that worked before 1929.

Sacrifice Achievement.

"We are now passing through a period of change and adjustment that will eventually result in a period of great social progress. The youth of today must pay for this by sacrificing individual achievement."

The educational set-up of this country has always encouraged individual achievement rather than the good of the group, Dr. Dreese pointed out.

"The new generation must be taught that service is success," he said. "In the future, students must be taught a broader social philosophy. This knowledge will eventually result in a social order that gives each person a good life and a satisfying work."

For members of the present generation hoping to find a place in a chaotic world, Dr. Dreese has some concrete advice.

"Young people today realize the day of grabbing, of pushing others down to attain success is past," he said. "What they want is a chance to make a living.

Must Adapt to Change.

"In order to do this they must be adaptable, able to adjust themselves to changing jobs and environments. Vocational training for a specific job is futile in this age of rapid change—professional change is of course an execption."

"If a graduate tries in every way to get a job and fails he should not feel it a disgrace to be unemployed," Dr. Dreese said.

"Neither should he be content to loaf," he added. "He should find some job in his community that needs to be done and do it. If he has not money enough to live on, he should not be too proud to accept relief."

Dr. Dreese believes a sense of social responsibility should be taught in the first grade in public schools.

Criminal Boys Back in Court In Short Time

Girls, Also, Reconvicted Sooner Than Their Elders.

YOUNG lawbreakers are apt to backslide, a study made by London criminologists has revealed.

A survey has shown that boys between the ages of 16 and 21 are more likely to be reconvicted after a first offense than any other class of offenders. Girl offenders of the same age are only slightly behind.

More than 30 per cent of the boys between 16 and 21 who were convicted for the first time in 1927, were brought before the courts again within the next five years. More than 23 per cent of the girls in the same category were reconvicted.

Of the male first offenders of all ages, the fewest to be reconvicted were those who had been sent to prison. Their percentage was 19. Those fined and reconvicted had a percentage of 20. The largest number of reconvictions were the men who were bound over or dismissed on their first appearance.

The study of reconvictions included 15,417 males and 2,540 females who were first offenders in 1927. It showed a steadily decreasing tendency to reconviction as the offenders advanced in age. For males over 40 the percentage of reconvictions was 12; for females in that class, 12.6.

Between 30 and 40 years the percentage for men was 17.8; for women, 16.2.

This was partly explained by the fact the older offenders were usually given longer sentences and not in a position to commit second offenses so quickly as were the younger offenders.

Archer Follows Men's Styles Where Shooting Is Concerned

World's Record Holder Finds Two Threats Face Women.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

"I'VE ALWAYS tried to shoot like a man," says Mrs. Josephine Taylor, of the Potomac Archers Club, Washington, D. C. This determination would seem to be richly rewarded, for on July 1 at a practice meet she scored 558, with 96 arrows at 60 yards, while the highest men's score was 452. As to National placement, she was fourth in the National tournament of the American Archers Association at Canandagua, N. Y., when she had been shooting for a little over a year.

Mrs. Taylor holds the world record for women, as far as is known, of 1,056, shooting 144 arrows, all hits, in the double Columbia round, which includes 50, 40 and 30 yard distances. This record, made at the open fall tournament of the club in 1932, sets a high price on her opinions.

She believes that the most important factor in "shooting like a man" is paying attention to small details. Women do not seem to realize, as well as men, how essentially success in archery is built on a pyramid of tiny pieces—exactitudes of stance, of releasing the string, of general form.

Two dangers threaten the average woman archer, Mrs. Taylor says. She may let her fancy be her guide, and vary too erratically, or she may keep on plodding in the same old rut of mistakes without analyzing what is wrong and correcting it.

The solution, she says, is to figure out what your best form should be and stick to it. Gradually, this will build up a routine, in which every small motion will be part of a pattern.

One illustration of her theory of attention to details is that all of Mrs. Taylor's equipment is made, exactly as she needs it, by her husband who is also an archer.

It isn't necessary for women to shoot men's distances, though, she says, in order to follow their example—and in her own case to beat them. However, she frequently practices with men.

"I don't bother to shoot over 60 yards—it isn't any fun," Mrs. Taylor says. "Men don't shoot over that distance for fun, either."

Paris Gives Rules For Autumn Clothes

Longer Skirts, Narrower Shoulders Good.

Paris, July 13 (U.P.).—With the sun streaming down in blistering arrows, Paris dressmakers today began the new deal in haute couture.

The semiannual ritual of showing the world what the well-dressed woman will wear was stamped with an all-French label for 1934-35. To be among the fashionable elite, Paris says, Eve's sisterhood will wear:

1. Longer skirts.
2. Narrower shoulders.
3. Quantities of dead black slightly relieved.
4. Exotic hats—many knitted and flat fur types.
5. Kid, peccary, doeskin and flat fur shoes for daytime. Satin, brocade, velvet and platinum for evening.
6. Costly fur coats and fox capes.
7. A modicum of jewelry when not genuine.
8. Gloves matching ensembles and mid-elbow.
9. Skin-fit lingerie.
10. Colors from the East Indies, deepened, blended, combined and contrasted with black and a new black-iris brown.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

Everyone on this date, possibly will be intent on getting through with whatever work that has to be attended to, as early as possible, so as to close up "shop," and have this Saturday afternoon free. Freedom from business will result in a great amount of social activity.

If a woman and born on July 14 you are always as busy planning as a queen bee, and quite as industrious. Avoid letting too many ideas crowd into your head at one time. You may find it is better to have one good idea which is practical, and concentrate in putting that over, than a number which will only confuse and be productive of no results. Any line of business that will bring you into close contact with the public should offer unlimited opportunity for one of your personality. Restaurant, exclusive type of shop, handling highly specialized lines, or interior decorating are fields of activity in which you should shine. You should be extremely lucky at love, providing you refrain from flirtations.

The child born on July 14, when it reaches school age, may prove to be very studious, and possess decided histrionic powers, which may prove a decided help to popularity with both teachers as well as fellow students.

The man born on July 14 has a decided amount of initiativeness, and is excellent as an organizer. If born on this date, you should meet with great success in any line of promotional work. Real estate development should offer great opportunity for a man of your caliber. Journalism might also prove profitable.

This Unusual Tea Room a Stable Once

It Has More Than Atmosphere—Plenty of Good Food.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT isn't visible from the street. All one sees is a gray stone arch and a large iron gate. But those who enter find recompense in a cool quiet garden—or, if they please, in one of the oddest tea rooms in Washington. Odd, because it used to be a stable!

Back in the days when gentlemen took pride in prancing bays and in shining carriages, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, leader in the Spanish and Indian wars, built this stable on his estate. It housed his fine horses, then familiar sights in the streets of Washington. During the evolution of horses to horsepower, one of the first "steam buggies" in the district was "boarded" there. The hay racks, feed boxes, harness hooks, and saddle trees which the general used are still there, but the stalls have been changed to cozy dining nooks!

But there's more than atmosphere. If one drops in for Sunday supper there is chicken and waffles. Any time from 12 until 8 every day there's a menu of numerous good things. Meals are painstakingly prepared here to have a home touch.

There are two delicacies which have carried the reputation of this tearoom across several surrounding States, butterscotch rolls and Kentucky beaten biscuits. They may be ordered with the meal or bought to take out.

Recently the manager bought some small bridge dictionaries which she uses for advertising. Despite their pocket size, they're quite complete. Call or write in and she'll be glad to present you with one. It's really an opportunity as these identical dictionaries sell for 25 cents downtown.

Prepared Ice Cream.

It only takes three to five minutes to prepare one quart or one gallon of a new quick freezing ice cream. The ingredients come already boxed in a container that sells at only one Washington store. In spite of this exclusiveness a box is only ten cents.

Choose whatever flavor you desire, and add fresh fruit if you like. After that, one cup of milk, and one of thick cream. When everything is mixed, just put it in the ice box tray and forget it until time to serve. Not that a stir or two would hurt. But it isn't essential.

Banana Milkshake.

To your familiar slogans add the new one, "Drink a fresh, ripe banana!" It sounds rather startling and even a bit sappy, but that's only a first impression. Think it over. Here's a country gone daffy over such things as "budgets," "recovery" and new ideas and new drinks in general. Mix them up with this strange slogan and what do you get? Buy a banana on any budget, recover from anything that ails you by drinking it in a milkshake.

To make this cold, creamy milkshake, just slice or break a fully ripe banana into a medium wire or mesh strainer with a spoon. Combine with a cup of cold milk and a fourth of a teaspoon of vanilla. Then take your daily dozen by shaking it in a cocktail shaker! Mix well and sprinkle with nutmeg.

Or one can do it another way. Mash the banana with a spoon, beat with a rotary egg beater until creamy, then mix with milk and vanilla. An electric mixer makes it twice as easy. Break the banana into the bowl of the mixer, beat at a low speed until creamy, add the other ingredients gradually, and continue to beat until smooth.

That recently arisen clan, "banana and milk" dieters, are able by this "drink a banana" idea to vary their routine and continue reducing by drinking their lunch.

White Grape Juice.

Many pre-prohibition practices have returned lately. The manager of a local food shop said white grape juice was as popular now as it used to be. Back before 1919 it was used sometimes instead of champagne as a base for punch. And now it's being used in the same way.

Those interested in less dynamic beverages than modern punches would enjoy a tall glass of white grape juice with a lot of crushed ice and a maraschino cherry. It's a splendid cooler in the middle of a hot and humid afternoon.

Tomato Juice Sale.

All next week there's going to be a sale of tomato juice in the food shop of a local store. Three quarts of it for 65 cents!

Don't worry about the quality. It's a product of an English firm which has recently established an American plant because of the splendid reception always given their goods in this country.

For the Telephone Book.

A local store is selling out some large leather book bindings. These are in the style of rare old bindings with their etched designs giving them an expensive look. One dollar and 35 cents is a scant sum to pay for covering your telephone book, which one of these bindings will just fit.

New Orleans Housewife Wins Recipe Prize With Ice Cream

By Susan Mills.

First prize, $3, goes to Mrs. Raymond Pearce, 814 St. Peter street, New Orleans, La. It is for fig ice cream. Mrs. Peter says the figs are growing on the garden walls down there, but that we, in Washington, can substitute canned ones for fresh. Second prize, $2, awarded Miss Ethel M. Merritt. Her contribution is a ginger sherbet. Third prize, $1, is given to Mrs. Ruth Wright, in care of C. K. Hammitt, 22 South Eastfield avenue, Trenton, N. J., for watermelon dressed up in a new way

The recipes were judged on the bases of simplicity, originality and practicality. The winners appear in order:

Fig Ice Cream.

Mix ingredients and freeze.

Ginger Sherbet.

¾ cup preserved ginger, 2 egg whites, ¼ cup of sugar, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 4 cups of water.

Boil water and sugar for about 10 minutes or until a sirup is formed. Cool. Add the ginger and lemon juice. Freeze partly. Add the beaten egg whites and complete the freezing.

Watermelon Sherbet.

Cut a watermelon lengthwise, in zigzags. Scoop out interior, seeding. Mash this with potato masher, then, preferably, mash through sieve. If a sufficiently ripe, sweet melon, add nothing, if not very sweet, add from ½ to 1 cup of sugar.

Simply freeze and replace, heaped a little in one of the two halves, the bottom of which has been sliced off to make it sit level.

Pomona Sherbet.

Raspberry Frappe.

Cook 1 quart of the berries in 2 cups of water, strain after boiling 8 minutes. Cool, and add juice of 2 lemons, and a wine glass of good sherry wine. Freeze to a mush.

MRS. MARY V. DUVALL.

Date Parfait.

1 pint whipping cream, 3 eggs, 3 tablespoons water, ¼ cup maple sirup, 1 cup ground dates.

Heat sirup and water, pour over well-beaten eggs, stirring well. Cool. Add whipped cream and ground dates to the egg mixture, and freeze 4 hours in ice and salt.

MRS. A. R. HUNTER.

Mrs. N. N. Nock suggests: Stir 1 cup of sugar into a small can of crushed pineapple; add a pint of buttermilk and freeze. Here's Miss Joyce Talbert's idea: Pour into freezing tray fruit juice, pop, or ginger ale. When partly frozen add lollypop sticks and continue freezing. Good ideas, aren't they?

Have Ideas About Corn? Send Them to The Post

Have you had the first corn-on-the-cob? What about recipes for corn preparation? Send them to Susan Mills, The Washington Post, by Thursday of next week. Any number of recipes may be sent; each should contain the name and full address of the contributor. Contributions should be typewritten if possible. Prizes will be the same; $3, $2, and $1.

How to Keep Well

Hydrophobia of Babies.

We should be cautious but not unduly alarmed about dog bites. Every year thousands of people are bitten by healthy dogs. All such wounds should be treated surgically in order to prevent infection.

On the other hand, bites from dogs that are sick must not be regarded lightly, because the dog, through no fault of his own, may be infected with rabies and thus become a serious menace to those about him. Whenever rabies is present in a community all dog bites must be viewed with suspicion, as it has been shown that the saliva of the infected dog may contain the virus several days before he shows symptoms of illness.

Hydrophobia has been known for centuries, and at different periods in the world's history has spread with great rapidity from lower animals to man. It was through the remarkable work of a great French scientist, Louis Pasteur, that a method was developed of preventing this dread disease.

Although many animals are susceptible, rabies is communicated to man usually through dog bites. The dog in turn can acquire the disease only when bitten by another animal that has it. There is a popular but erroneous belief that the disease may be brought on in dogs by great heat, excessive food, lack of water, excitement, &c.

The virus of rabies attacks the nervous system. Some 20 years ago Adelchi Negri, an Italian, discovered certain peculiar bodies in the nerve tissues of animals afflicted with hydrophobia. Since then finding "Negri bodies" in the brains of dogs has been accepted as positive evidence of the existence of the disease.

The dog afflicted with rabies as a rule shows increased excitability and restlessness and usually becomes cross and snappy. The disease, however, may take the form in which the dog, sensing that he is ill, seeks to hide. Whether the symptoms be of the restless, irritable type or the quiet, morose kind, the dog rarely lives more than a week or ten days after the onset.

Dog bite wounds should be allowed to bleed freely and should be promptly and thoroughly cauterized with concentrated nitric acid. The animal should not be killed, but quarantined and observed for any signs of illness. If the dog dies within two or three weeks the brain should be examined and if Negri bodies be found, all persons infected should be given the Pasteur treatment. This treatment has been firmly established for many years. If the bite be from a dog known to have hydrophobia, the Pasteur treatment should be instituted without delay. In untreated cases in human beings symptoms will usually appear in from three to eight weeks.

Prevention means safety. Many States, cities and towns have dog quarantine laws that operate more or less efficiently during several months of the year. It is essential to muzzle dogs that are permitted to roam the streets. Stray dogs are dangerous and in most enlightened communities are caught and quarantined before being disposed of. A few years ago an outbreak occurred in Ontario. Many persons as well as large numbers of horses, cattle, sheep and swine were bitten by diseased dogs. In spite of the strenuous efforts of the health authorities it required five years to bring the disease under control. Two minor outbreaks were traced to dogs shipped from the infected area.

"Water on Knee."

Mrs. A. J. writes: I have had water on the knee for several weeks. I bruised this knee quite some time before the fluid gathered. Is there a cure for it and, if so, what?

Reply.

Some cases of "water on the knee" get well spontaneously. Some require operation. Most cases are benefited and many are cured by local treatment adapted to the case, such as wearing a cast, massage, heat and light. Some cases are due to tubercular infection.

Trachoma.

F. H. writes: What is trachoma?

Reply.

Trachoma is a chronic inflammation of the eyelids. It is infectious, being spread by the use of common towels, wash basins and such. Perhaps flies help to spread it. Poorly nourished people are especially subject to it. In some sections it causes considerable chronic sore eyes and some blindness.

Jellied Soups Need Special Zip and Zest

By Ann Barrett.

NOT just a hot soup turned cold. But a soup specially seasoned for zip and flavor, then jellied just right, and chilled to the limit—that's the kind of summer first-course favored by more and more people (including screen-star Genevieve Tobin).

Vegetables play a big part in these jellied soups. In fact, tomato, beet, and celery bouillon are three great favorites. And here's how they're made:

Jellied Tomato Bouillon.

For jellied tomato bouillon, first put following ingredients into good-sized saucepan: 2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 3 tablespoons chopped celery leaves, 6 whole black peppers, 6 whole cloves, ¼-inch piece bayleaf and 4 cups bouillon (canned or made from bouillon cubes or paste). Simmer this mixture about 25 minutes.

Then put mixture through a sieve to get about 4 cups liquid. Add extra salt, if needed. Then add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 5 teaspoons unflavored gelatin (first softened in 1-3 cup cold water). Stir till gelatin is thoroughly dissolved, turn into a pan and chill. When ready to serve, beat mixture up with fork, to break it into small pieces, and then spoon these out into chilled bouillon cups. Garnish with sliced lemon or parsley.

Jellied Beet Bouillon.

For the famous jellied beet bouillon prized so highly by Russians and Poles, here's how: First scrub and boil (or steam) 4 medium-sized beets (about 1½ pounds) till tender. Then peel and mash them (or rub them through a coarse, strong sieve) and add 4 cups of stock (beef or chicken), 2 tablespoons chopped celery leaves, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, ¼-inch piece bayleaf and a few grains of cayenne pepper. Cover and simmer about 30 minutes. Then squeeze and strain mixture through cheesecloth. Add extra salt if needed, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 5 teaspoons unflavored gelatin (first softened in 1-3 cup cold water). Stir till gelatin is dissolved, then chill, breaking mixture up with fork before serving. Garnish with whipped cream, if you like.

Jellied Celery Bouillon.

Jellied celery bouillon (extra good, I think) calls first for 3 cups of chopped celery (stalks and leaves both). To this add 3½ cups cold water, 3 whole cloves, 3 whole black peppers, 1 sprig parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped onion. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Then strain through cheesecloth, add 1 cup chicken or veal stock, and bring to a boil. Next, remove from fire. Taste and add more salt, if necessary. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 5 teaspoons unflavored gelatin (first softened in 1-3 cup cold water). Chill mixture till it starts to thicken, then fold in ½ cup minced, tender celery. When ready to serve, break up with fork, spoon into chilled bouillon cups—garnish with whipped cream, if you like.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

In yesterday's instalment of this fact story of life in Soviet Russia, the author told of attending a meeting to which she was ordered and worrying about her child alone at home when the meeting did not get under way in time. You can pick up this fact story at this point.

AT last I could not endure any more. I slipped out and rushed downstairs as though I were chased. In the hall I ran against a young Communist who was on guard there, but I put on my overcoat defiantly before his very eyes.

"Where are you off to, comrade? Surely the meeting isn't over yet?" came the malicious question.

"No, but I have to go to my evening work."

"Oh, is that so?" he drawled spitefully, not believing me. "Don't forget that there's a sifting going on."

I was not listening. I was caught, anyway. It was no use going back. And I wouldn't do it, I was not going to let the child go hungry till night time.

The frost was getting sharper. It was 18-20 R. I. walked as fast as I could to be in time for the Co-op.

Empty counters. On the shelves there were packets of mustard and bay leaf. I looked about desperately to see if there was anything eatable—no, nothing! There was a barrel of salted herrings, but one could only buy them on ration cards, from ½ pound to 1 pound per month. There was a barrel of green salted tomatoes, but they looked so flabby and horrid that one could only buy them from sheer despair.

Bought Honey.

The shop assistant was wearing his fur coat because the place was hardly ever heated. Blue with cold, bored and cross, he muttered morosely:

"What do you want? I haven't got anything."

At that moment I saw a jar of artificial honey in the corner of an empty shelf.

"Honey, please."

Reluctantly he took it off the shelf and pushed it into my hand in silence, without wrapping it up. I paid 2 roubles 80 copecks for ½ pound of yellow sweetish sirup. Anyway, it would be a treat for the child.

Here was my door. I rang the bell. I heard him running to the door. What a joy it was that I could still hear his footsteps, that I was just going to see his dear little face. But his father? . . . Would he ever see the child again?

"Why, mother, it's 6 o'clock! Just look—6! I am hungry."

"Have you bought any oil?"

Too Hungry to Wait.

"No. The queue is several streets long. I should freeze to death if I stood there, hungry. There is a little left in the can."

"Have you brought up any logs?"

"No. It's so dark in the shed."

"And why were you so late?"

"Late! There was a general meeting, and you know there's a sifting going on. I've been caught as it is."

"You can't even run away properly!" he said, laughing, glad to be no longer alone. His little face looked pinched with hunger. It was cold in the rooms and still colder in the kitchen; we did not heat it—fuel was scarce, and we had nothing to cook. We used a primus.

Child Was Hungry.

"Well, shall we go down for the logs now?"

"Mother!" he said piteously, "mother, I am hungry! I have had nothing since midday at school, and it was precious little too—just millet porridge and no milk or sugar with it, only dirty-looking gravy."

I gave in, because I, too, had had nothing since breakfast, and running about in the frost made me giddy with hunger. We went into the kitchen to warm up the soup.

"What else is there?"

"Well, never mind, we can have some tea. I brought a loaf, and, you know, it's not very stale. . . . I've only eaten a little piece," he added, catching my look of alarm.

We never had new bread because by the time it was brought from the central bakeries to the depots and distributed among the district bakeries it was a day or two old. There is no need to say that no pure wheaten bread was baked; it always looked grayish.

Childish Fears.

The boy saw to the primus, chattering all the time like a bird released from a cage, and I cut up potatoes for our second course.

"Well, so they haven't turned you off yet?"

"Not yet."

"What shall we live on, if they do?"

"I'll get some other job. If only they don't lock me up!" The words escaped me. I had no one to talk to. I was afraid of compromising my friends, and indeed I felt far off from everyone, but the boy shared my sorrow and trouble.

"And what shall I do all by myself, mother?" he asked piteously, and tears came into his eyes.

"Go to school. Wait for me. Take food to daddy and me in prison—you know there's no one else to do it. Why, look, the Ivanovs are both in prison, father and mother, and there are five children left. Only the little girl is older than you, but they manage somehow. . . . Better come and have supper."

It is dreadful to think of the number of children left to themselves. A few days ago a young woman who died of consumption was being buried. Her husband was in the Shpalerny prison. A few days before her death he had been sentenced to penal servitude at Solovki. He was not allowed to go and say good-by to her, and she was too weak to get up. Only two children, a boy and a girl, stood by her grave, holding hands, like the children in some heart-rending fairy tale.

Just as we sat down to supper there was a ring at the bell. What new trouble was this? After my husband's arrest no one came to see us.

"From the house-committee," declared a nasty-looking one-eyed old man, former porter at the house next door and now a Communist.

"What is it?"

"Have you two rooms?"

"Yes."

"You'll have to move into one. It's too much for you. What do you want with two rooms?"

"I have a right to them; mother and son are not supposed to share a room."

Wanted Her Rooms.

"Right, indeed! Much I care about rights when there isn't room for people! Would you have me put working men in the basement and leave you gentry nice and comfortable?" he shouted in a horrid, high-pitched falsetto.

"I tell you I have a right to the room, and I will stick up for it."

"We shall see!" he said menacingly. "You'd better remember where your husband is!"

He went away, swearing at me at the top of his voice as he walked downstairs. The boy clung to me in alarm.

"What will he do to us, mother?"

"Nothing, don't you mind him. He is just trying to frighten us, but he can't do anything."

Alas, I knew that he could do a great deal, and not merely by his rudeness and impudence. He guessed that I might be arrested any day and hastened the hour by sending in reports to the OGPU, anxious to let the rooms—the most precious thing in U. S. S. R.; he could easily get a bribe of 2,000 or 3,000 roubles for them and sell the lease for 5,000 or 6,000.

Our soup had gone cold. We no longer felt hungry. Attacks of the house committee is the worst thing, next to OGPU, because they threaten to rob one of one's home—the last refuge in that dreadful life.

Smith's Fine 68 Tops at St. Paul

Cooper Is Trailing by Stroke; Hagen's 71 Ties for Third.

By Paul Mickelson.

ST. PAUL, July 13 (AP).—Horton Smith, of Chicago, peeled off his bandages and proceeded to smash par with a rousing 68 today to beat the field in the opening 18-hole skirmish of the $5,000 St. Paul Open Golf championship.

The blonde shotmaker's performance, which marked his first serious start since he wrenched his left side badly in the National Open at Merion last month, was one shot better than his closest pursuer, Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and three blows lower than a quiet which landed in a deadlock for third place with 71s to beat par by a shot.

Tied at 71 were Walter Hagen, of Detroit, hot after one of the few championships to escape him, Bunney Torpey, of Kansas City, who first arose to fame in the National Professional championship last year; Herman Barron, one of the real stars of the professional brigade, from Port Chester, N. Y.; Oliver Sleppy, of St. Louis, and Gunnard Johnson, home-town pride of St. Paul. Four others, among them Olin Dutra, new National Open champion, were tied with par 72s.

All Favorites Survive.

Not a single favorite in the 72-hole battle faded out of championship reach during the day, which was featured by two holes-in-one on the 130-yard fourth hole. Sam aPrks, of Pittsburgh, and Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Ohio, were the ace shooters. Ky Laffoon, of Denver, who lost to Cooper in the Western Open play-off, also thrilled the large gallery by sinking a 40-yard approach shot on the twelfth for an eagle, a break he needed to get 72.

Deadly iron shots and the same red-hot putter that enazbled him to win top money in Bobby Jones' comeback show in the Augusta National last winter produced the mighty Smithy's par-smashing score today. He lost a shot to par on the second and seventeenth holes, but more than made up for his two mistakes with six birdies, most of them scored with putts of from 10 to 20 feet. His prize hole of the day was the 456-yard tenth, where he smashed out a beautiful tee shot and then sailed the ball a yard from the hole with a No. 1 iron. Horton's rounds were 35—33.

Cooper in Good Form.

Cooper, who now has beaten par by 29 shots over 234 holes of tournament golf, seldom, if ever, was off line as he raced over the championship Keller municipal course. With a little more luck, the "Lighthorse," who has taken $4,900 out of the four St. Paul opens, might have scored a 66, as three of his putts stopped stubbornly on the lip of the cup.

Play will continue over 18 holes tomorrow after which the low 64 and ties will battle it out over the final 36 holes Sunday for the top money of $1,500.

Nats, Outhit by Cleveland, Win as Stewart Goes Route

During the first four innings Stewart was well-nigh invincible, but in the latter stages of play, particularly the ninth inning, when play was resumed after rain, he wobbled slightly, but not enough to suit the Indians.

The Tribe put the tying runs on bases in the final inning, and put one over, but left the other stranded in the paleface stockade pleading for a healthy sock of the tommyhawk. But Stewart literally picked off the last man to face him, squelching the rally.

Washington made two-thirds of its final score in the opening inning when Hildebrand was just getting the feel of things. He felt rather badly when Stone punched a double to right with only one out, and even worse as Manush waited for four balls and got them.

Schulte Brings in Pair.

Hildebrand recovered his composure and reached the third inning without further damage, but in this stanza the Nats put over their last run on a single by Stone and triple off Travis' bat. The last blow looked to be an easy out. It was a liner to center that Averill misjudged. Harris, running for Stone, brought over the run.

After pitching singles to Knickerbocker in the first and Hale in the second, Stewart coasted through to the fifth, mowing the Indians down one, two, three. Hale's two-bagger, followed by Pytlak's single to center field gave the Indians their first run.

Looks Bad in Sixth.

From that point on the Tribe faithfully nicked Stewart for two hits an inning, and in the sixth, when Luke Sewell was guilty of a passed ball, the situation looked as dark as the clouds congregating over the park.

But Seedy Seeds, who led off with a single and advanced to second on Sewell's slip, was nipped at third, Cronin to Travis, on Knickerbocker's roller. Averill followed with a double to right, before Stewart fanned Vosmik and Trosky flied to Harris in right.

A double play, Cronin to Myer to Kress, extricated Stewart from another embarrassing situation in the seventh, and a mild cloudburst that resulted in a suspension of all activities but the ladies' booing, gave him a much-needed rest in the eighth, with two on base.

Two Men on, None Out.

Before it was all over, the Injuns gave Stewart and the Nats the jitters in both the eighth and ninth. When Seeds opened the eighth with a single and Knickerbocker walked, they had the tying runs on base with none out. Relief then came in the form of Averill's pop to Travis. Rain then forced both teams off the stage.

When hostilities were resumed, Vosmik banged a single to right that brought plenty of sunshine to the scene for the ladies in the stands, but gladdened hearts turned to saddened hearts when a fast relay from Harris to Cronin to Sewell caught Seeds at the plate to end the inning.

The Injuns were still making threatening gestures in the ninth. Hale led off with a double to right and Kamm smacked a single to left, again putting the tying runs on base with none out. But Stewart was equal to the emergency. Hale scored on Pytlak's fly to right, but Winegarner fouled weakly to Kress and Seeds grounded into the box.

Source of Bad Luck.

Cleveland has been a source of bad luck for the Nationals all season. In an exhibition game with the Indians on March 27 at New Orleans, L uke Sewell suffered a fractured finger that prohibited his playing until midway in the year. It was late in a game with Cleveland at Griffith Stadium, that Cecil Travis, rookie third baseman, was struck on the head by a pitched ball hurled by Thornton Lee, and necessarily spent several days on a hospital cot.

Buddy Myer suffered a spike wound, inflicaed by Pytlak on the first Western trip of the year, and in the same game Travis spoked Jack Russell, putting both out of commission for almost a week.

Braves' 4 Runs In 7th eBat Cubs

Berger'sHomer Starts Rally Ending in 7-6 Win.

Boston, July 13 (AP).—Wally Berger's twentieth homer of the season started a sevent-inning, four-run rally that enabled the Boston Braves to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 7-6, today in the last game of the series. Bill Lee, who pitched the Cubs to their only other two defeats this month, was charged with the defeat.

After Berger opened the lucky frame with his circuit drive, singles by Hal Lee and Pinky Whitney brought Bud Tinning into relief action for Chicago's starting pitcher. Randy Moore, batting for Dick Gyselman, singled and Marty McManus doubled with the bases loaded, driving in two runs. After Al Spohrer was intentionally passed, filling the bases again, Bill Urbanski went up for Relief Pitcher Dick Barrett and drove over the winning run with an infield single.

Local inspectors will supervise the bouts and collect the 5 per cent due the commission.

Doctors Say Stone Out For '34

Injury Is Fifth Received by Nats This Year in Indian Games.

CLEVELAND, July 13 (Spl.).—The combination of Cleveland and jinx-laden Friday the thirteenth was too much for the hapless Nats and they were dealt another crushing blow today when Johnny Stone, regular right fielder, suffered a fractured ankle in the third inning.

At Lakeside Hospital, where Stone was removed, physicians said he would be out for the remainder of the season.

The accident occurred under peculiar circumstances. Stone had just singled to right, his second hit of the fray, when Manush grounded to Hale's left, midway between second and first. It was impossible to make a play at second and Stone went into the bag standing up, turning as he did to watch the play at first. His ankle appeared to buckle under him.

Is Given First Aid.

He fell to the ground writhing in pain. "Lefty" Weisman, Cleveland trainer, and Dr. Edward Castle, club physician, rendered first aid and ordered him removed to the hospital.

Eddie Eynon, Washington secretary, immediately telephoned Clark Griffith in Washington and interrupted his golfing at Indian Spring Club long enough to inform him of the latest calamity to befall the team.

It is believed that Washington will make an effort to obtain Jake Powell, former Washington sandlotter, now with Baltimore, and one of the International League's prize packages.

It was Stone who started the Washington rally in the first inning, doubling to right. Manush walked, and Cronin's bounder advanced both runners, but the manager was out.

Giants Stave Off Pirates, Win, 7-6

Smith Relieves Fitzsimmon in Ninth Inning.

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP).—The Giants increased their National League lead to two-full games today when the stood off a ninth inning rally to defeat the Pirates 7 to 6 in the series final.

After getting a long lead through the clouting of Joe Moore and Frank O'Doul. Freddy Fitzsimmons blew up in the ninth and gave four runs on an error by Blondy Ryan and four hits. The tying counter was first when Al Smith retired the last Pittsburgh batsman.

O'Doul socked a homer with one on to climax a three-run rally against Red Lucas in the first. Moore pasted two circuit blows, a double and a single in five times up to account for four of the New York tallies.

The annual battles with University of Maryland, May 1, and Georgetown, May 11, an intersectional contest with Michigan as the opposing force, and games with Harvard, Penn State, Vermont, University of Virginia, are among the high spots of the diamond schedule, aside from the traditional battle with the rival Army Cadets to be staged at West Point. Manya, Favorite, Wins Rockingham Feature Under Hard Ride by Jockey Peters

Little Stokes Is Second At Mile

Par Value Is Third as Choice Races in Good Time of 1::39 3-5.

SALEM, N. H., July 13 (AP).—Running true to prerace predictions, Manya, 4-year-old filly from A. A. Baroni's Stable, today won the mile feature of an all-claiming program at Rockingham Park.

The daughter of Master Charlie, in the money in ten previous starts, came from off the pace to win by a length, with Mrs. R. T. Flippen's Little Stokes, an outsider, in second place. Abe Bartelstein's Par Value was another length to the rear, in third place.

As the favorite, Manya paid $5 for $2 after stepping the 8 furlongs in the good time of 1:39 3-5.

Cabouse, with a record of winning two of his three starts at the New Hampshire course, was the first to show in front, and for three-quarters of a mile held a slight advantage over Fred Almy, with Manya never far off the pace. As the field shot around the bend, however, Jockey Peters sent the Baroni filly to the front and she was never headed, although ridden out at the finish.

Captain Argo Wins Empire City Race

Big Show Is Disqualified in Final Event.

Empire City Race Track, July 13 (AP).—After three straight favorites had gone down to defeat, the Kershaw Stable's Captain Argo, with the diminutive Charley Rosengarten in the saddle, came along and broke the spell by winning the Roundtree Purse at odds of 9 to 5 here today. W. B. Miller's Mad Beth, th second choice, just lasted to head the Howe Stable's Scotch Gold for the place. Captain Argo, under a mere 103 pounds, covered the short six furlongs in the fast time of 1:08 4-5.

The first disqualification of the meeting materialized when Big Show, Pascuma up, was set back in the final event. This gave the race to the 8-to-1 shot, Wedding Ring. Pending was awarded the place and Stepbrother the show. The latter appeared to be bothered by Big Show in the stretch.

This was a double blow for Pascuma, for the stewards had just announced that the jockey is suspended indefinitely for unsatisfactory riding.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

First race—Clocker Mike is on one of his winning streaks and I'm going to take his word on Color Bearer. He says this one has been working like the wind. Sweepogan and Gay Blade to complete the money picture.

Second race—Ayston has only to run back to that recent victory to take care of this field. A sharp one which gets in with only steadying weight. Macadam, assigned only 97 pounds, will have something to say about the cash distribution. Happy Scot to show.

Thir race- Paper Profits and Merovech should battle it out for the chief award here. Both are fit horses, but they can not afford to make mistakes. Clocker Mike is recommending the lightly-weighted Luck In for a shot at the main money. The short sprint favors this one.

Fourth race—Gold Step has a nice morning move to his credit and gets in this with a light impost. Breaks off the rail and may spring a surprise. Star Porter is as dangerous as those recent victories indicated, but carries a trifle too much weight. Chinese Empress for the rest.

Fifth race—I'm not trying to blow u pthe mutuel machine, nor am I shooting at the moon when I put Piety on top of this heap. This one is the lightweight of the party and I believe I know something. Take it or leave it. Collateral and Fleam for the other places.

Sixth race—Old Depot and Adobe Post figure on top on these and I believe the race lays between them. I prefer them in the order named. Biff is dangerous on occasions and can not be discarded entirely.

Seventh race—Brown Wisdom seems best suited of this group. Will have The Heathen to beat if the old fellow's legs hold up. Parties for the show.

Eighth race—Outbound and Steelhead for the place and show in the finale. Kabitzer is fit as a gddle, but is slightly overmatched.

Golf to Mrs. Yates And Mrs. Mackenzie

Mrs. Roland Mackenzie and Mrs. F. L. Yates won the low gross in a ladies' Scotch foursome played at the Congressional Country Club yesterday. Low net was captured by Mrs. J. F. Dowdall and Mrs. J. H. Towell.

SQUEEZE OUT moved up gamely on the inside, assumed a brief lead, but tired in the last three-sixteenths. GRAND UNION had good speed for the first six furlongs. SILVERDALE stopped badly. SAMBO BROWN trailed his field for the first five furlongs, moved around on the outside and, closing stoutly through the stretch, was going away at the end. PIECEMEAL restrained early, was kept under intermittent punishment through the stretch and held on well. ZEMBLA closed going gamely. SOUTHARD weakened in the closing quarter-mile. HIGH SOCKS faltered after displaying speed for the first six furlongs. GABBO, under stout restraint early, flattened out badly when called upon.

Stocks Display Firmer Tone; Sale Larger

Rails Regain Part of Loss as Trading Rises to 520,000 Shares.

New York, July 13 (AP).—Stocks displayed firmer tendencies in the final hour of today's session coincident with a substantial rally in grains and cotton. Earlier losses of fractions to around a point were canceled in a number of instances. The trading volume picked up a little on the recovery, but transfers approximated only 520,000 shares. The close was fairly steady.

The rails, heaviest of the list, got back some of their declines in the late buying flurry. At the same time freight car loadings for the week ended July 7 showed a more than seasonal drop, even with the Fourth of July holiday included. The decrease in loadings from the previous week amounted to 124,765 cars, which was 23,703 under the like 1933 period, but 103,897 ahead of the 1932 week.

Wheat, off about 1 cent a bushel at one time, came back with a rush in the afternoon dealings, getting up to $1 a bushel for the first time since the beginning of June; corn, firm most of the day, also developed further strength. Closing grain prices ranged from 1 to more than 3 cents a bushel. Cotton jumped around $1.50 a bale on unfavorable weather reports and sympathy with the cereals to its best levels since 1930. Silver and rubber did not take part in the recovery movement. Bonds were a trifle mixed. Foreign exchanges were a bit easier.

Advances of 1 to some 3 points to new 1934 highs were recorded by shares of United States Smelting, Hercules Powder, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and American Sugar Refining. Twin City Rapid Transit, common and preferred, drew followings for gains of 1 and 6 points, respectively.

Others up fractionally to around a point included United States Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Du Pont, Montgomery Ward, American Can, Consolidated Gas, United States Industrial Alcohol, Cerro de Pasco and American Commercial Alcohol. Southern Railway dropped more than a point, but Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio were only slightly lower at the finish.

No Eagle Wanted, Man Closes Plant

Says He Never Will Open Under NRA.

Salisbury, Md., July 13 (AP). — Ordered to "surrender" the Blue Eagle for alleged violations of the lumbermen's code, Manlius K. Morris, manufacturer of farm produce packages, declared today he had closed his plant and "will never open it under the NRA."

"I have never had the Blue Eagle and never wanted it," Morris said. "How can anyone give up something they never had."

"My plant will remain shut down if it has to have the Blue Eagle."

Morris said his lumber plant at Powellville has provided employment for 40 persons. To these he said he pays 20 cents an hour and furnishes home rent free and free fuel.

South Dakota Cattle Arrive at Culpeper

Culpeper, Va., July 13 (Spl.).—Seven hundred head of cattle from the drought lands of South Dakota arrived here today, to be distributed among nearby farms for pasturage.

Arrangements were made by W. C. Stiles, a former Virginian, now living in Texas, who made personal investigation as to the suitability of the land offered for pasturage. The farmers will receive $1 per head per month for cattle grazed.

Richmond Code Group Upholds Fair Practices

Richmond, July 13 (AP).—National recovery act code authority representatives for the Richmond area today adopted resolutions asking the Federal Government to retain fair practice provisions in NRA codes.

The representatives said that if price cutting and other unfair business tactics were allowed, merchants who observed wage and hour regulations would be at a disadvantage.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Decline of Bids on Bond Offering of New York City Raises the Interesting Question of When RFC Interference Is Justified.

By Ralph West Robey.

Whether the New York banks in bidding on the offering of the bonds of that city actually quoted too low a price is a question that few people are in a position to answer. Mayor La Guardia maintains that they did. He charges that the banks "ganged" on the city. In consequence he has declined the bid and rushed to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to see if it would not take the issue. It is this latter aspect of the case that is especially worthy of attention.

First, however, recall a few of the facts involved: This was the first issue of bonds by New York in more than three years, or since its credit was subjected to such strain in the midst of the depression. The offering was for $72,000,000. Maturities ranged from about ten months to 48 years; $12,000,000 being due May 10 next year, and the rest being serially distributed, $6,000,000 from one to 15 years, another $6,000,000 from one to 36 years, and $48,000,000 from one to 48 years.

Bid Involved Averaging Long and Short Maturities.

In making the bid the maturities were averaged and just one figure was quoted. This amounted to a rate of interest of a little over 4 per cent—4.0365, to be exact. Mayor La Guardia holds that this is an unreasonable rate. According to reports the city expected a rate of 3.90. And it must be admitted that when one looks at the bond market at present and considers that many Treasury obligations maturing under a year are selling at a price that gives a negative yield, a rate of better than 4 per cent does seem rather high for New York City obligations with only ten months to run.

To make such comparisions, however, is unfair. The 4.0365 rate applied not only to the short-term paper, but for bonds running 48 years. Long-term bonds of the city already in the market currently are selling to yield from 3.98 per cent to 4.21 per cent.

Ample Justification To Seek Lower Bids.

In spite of all of this, there still is ample reason for the mayor to hold to his opinion that the city should not have to pay over 4 per cent. It is quite within the bounds of propriety, accordingly, for him to decline the bid and ask for new ones. All of the banks in New York were not involved in the first syndicate and those that were not are potential bidders. Further, it is quite possible that the bid of the first syndicate might be lowered.

Trying to get a better rate in this manner, nevertheless, is vastly different than flying to the RFC for aid. For the latter there is no justification, at least not until the other possibilities have been exhausted. If the banks are unreasonable, if they have a monopoly position that eliminates all private competition, or if they refuse to submit a new bid, there is some reason to ask a Government agency to step in. As it is, however, interference by the RFC would have the effect merely of further delaying the opening up of the capital market. It might save New York one-tenth of 1 per cent, but it would cost the country in delayed recovery many times that amount. Mr. Jones accordingly in refusing to have anything to do with the issue has shown good judgment.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Holiday influences checked business on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities and Argentine rails were the steadiest sections on renewed support, but industrials, home rails, gold mining shares and rubber stocks eased. Courtaulds recovered a portion of an early loss, which was due to the disappointing dividend declaration. The market closed irregular.

Paris—In another inactive session on the bourse today, rentes were slightly higher. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Quotations on the boerse weakened as buyers exhibited hesitancy. Mining shares were bid for, but the closing was easy.

Wool Market.

Boston, July 13 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—The London wool sales closed Thursday with a slightly improved tone. Closing prices generally were about the same as at the opening, according to private concerns in this market receiving cables from London. The Boston market remained relatively inactive as members of the trade await some move by manufacturers. Spot quotations on domestic wools in Boston were largely nominal as a result of the lack of trading.

Metal Market.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—COPPER—Quiet; electrolytic, spot and future, Blue Eagle, 9.00.

TIN—Steady; spot and nearby, 51.90; future, 51.95.

IRON—Firm, unchanged.

LEAD—Steady; spot, New York, 3.75; East St. Louis, 3.60.

ZINC—Easier; East St. Louis, spot and future, 4.30.

ANTIMONY—Spot, 8.25.

Goods Markets.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Cotton goods markets were stronger today in moderate trading. Rayon yarn sales continued spotty. Silk throwsters have called a meeting to consider plans for curtailment of production. Silk goods were in moderate demand with larger preparations being made for production of silk underwear cloths. Wool goods were quiet. Burlaps held about steady with trading light.

Rubber Closes Steady.

New York, July 13 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed steady, unchanged to 4 lower. July, 14.60; September, 14.84 bid; October, 14.97 nominal; December, 15.22@15.23. Smoked ribbed, spot, closed 14.64 nominal.

Bond Market Continues in Mixed Trends

Corporate Loans Edge Higher, With Federals Slightly Lower.

New York, July 13 (AP).—The bond market today had an uneven tone all the session. United States Governments were mostly a shade lower at the close. Several high-grade corporate loans edged up fractionally and secondary issues were mixed.

There were gains ranging up to a point in some obligations of the Missouri Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Armour & Co., Great Northern Railway, North American Co. and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

A soft tone marked Postal Telegraph 5s, Southern Railway 4s, Nickel Plate 4½s and Erie 5s among others.

Italy 7s were a strong feature of the foreign list, gaining more than a point. Argentine issues weakened under a few small offerings. Other groups were narrowly changed.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Movement in foreign exchange rates were narrow yesterday.

The dollar gained a fraction in London, closing at 5.03¾ to the pound, a net rise of ⅜ of a cent. In New York, the pound dipped ⅛ of a cent to $5.03¾.

Production of Aluminum In Russia Seen Gaining

Russia by 1937 will be the world's largest producer of aluminum, according to the Vienna correspondent of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, publication of the American Chemical Society.

Four plants in operation are expected to produce 105,000 tons a year by 1937. Five projects involving metallic aluminum plants will probably be completed between 1934-36, with an estimated production of 125,000 tons.

Specialties Continue Rise; Utilities and Industrials Lose Fractions.

New York, July 13 (AP).—Prices on the Curb market were unsettled today, utilities, a number of industrials and alcohols losing small fractions, while specialties continued to higher levels. Trading was dull.

American Gas closed at 26⅛, off ¼; Cord Corporation, 3⅞, off ⅛; General Tire & Rubber 69, up 1; Great Atlantic & Pacific, 137½, up 1½; Hiram Walker, 33, off ½; International Petroleum, 27, up ¼; Newmont Mining, 52, up ¼; Pan-American Airways, 41, off ½; Parker Rustproof, 53½, up ½; Pittsburgh Plate Glass, 53, up ½; Sherwin-Williams, 70¼, off ⅛; Singer Manufacturing, 178, up 1; Standard Oil of Indiana, 27⅛, up ⅛; Technicolor, 13¼, off ¼.

Department store sales showed an 18 per cent increase during the first six months of the present calendar year as compared with 1933, a survey by the Federal Reserve Board reveals.

The changes ranged from a 10 per cent increase in the Federal Reserve district of New York to a maximum gain of 36 per cent reported by the Atlanta district.

The percentage increases by Federal Reserve districts: Boston, 12; New York, 10; Philadelphia, 13; Cleveland, 28; Richmond, 21; Atlanta, 36; Chicago, 25; St. Louis, 23; Minneapolis, 13; Kansas City, 21; Dallas, 30; San Francisco, 12.

Wheat Drives For $1 Mark In Buying Rush

Prices Score Advances of 2⅞ to 3½ Cents; All Grains Improve.

Chicago, July 13 (AP).—Aiming straight for the famous mark of $1 a bushel, wheat shot suddenly forward almost 5 cents late today and scored a perfect bull's-eye.

Excited speculative buying that accompanied unconfirmed reports of foreign developments of sensationally bullish character whirled December wheat in a few minutes to exactly $1, as compared with an earlier low price of 95⅛.

The rush of late buying came mostly from Eastern sources and caught the wheat market bare of offerings.

Wheat Closes Strong.

Despite active profit-taking on the crest of the rise, wheat closed strong within a fraction of the day's top, 2⅞ to 3½ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1⅝ advanced; oats, ⅜ to ⅝ up, and provisions showing 5 cents to 22 cents gain.

Today's quick upturn of the wheat market furnished the first dollar quotation since the middle of June. Contributing to the surprising outburst of strength was word of possible recurrence of damaging frosts tonight in Canada.

Another bullish factor was announcement that Australia unofficial wheat crop estimates had been reduced 10,000,000 bushels, as compared with authoritative recent predictions, and to 45,000,000 bushels below last year's total.

Stop-Loss Orders.

Many stop-loss orders were forced into execution by the violent late upward sweep of wheat values. Earlier, the market had been chiefly dominated by hedging sales associated with the domestic harvest movement from soft winter crop States, and had fallen temporarily about a cent a bushel.

It was not until late in the day that much attention was paid to Canadian reports of severe crop damage to spring wheat in some sections of the prairie provinces as well as the American Northwest, and to an estimate that the Argentine exportable surplus of wheat was much smaller than generally supposed, 54,000,000 bushels under a year ago.

Corn and oats advanced late with wheat. Corn traders showed considerable uneasiness also regarding danger of ill effects of hot winds at this stage of corn growth.

Provisions went higher, responsive to upturns of hog values and of grains.

Stockholders Assessed in Closed Banks

Millions Being Collected to Make Good to Depositors.

By Richard L. Gridley.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

More than $100,000,000 is being made good" to depositors in banks closed since the start of the depression by heavy assessments on many bank stockholders, official and private figures showed yesterday.

Suits to collect the usual 100 per cent assessment against bank stockholders in closed institutions have been instituted by both the Comptroller of the Currency and State banking authorities.

Difficulties of Collection.

Only a small portion of the more than $100,000,000 to be obtained for depositors is yet available due to litigation, difficulty in liquidating affairs of closed banks and inability of many bank stockholders to pay their assessment. The stock assessments are added to the assets of the closed banks and ultimately distributed pro-rata to depositors.

Moreover, the $100,000,000 is only "small change" when compared with the estimate by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, that depression losses in closed banks will run to $3,500,000,000.

Stockholders in closed National banks are now being assessed at the rate of more than $6,000,000 monthly, Comptroller of Currency F. T. O'Connor reported today. The average monthly rate for non-National banks is believed to be in excess of this.

Levies This Year.

In the first six months of this year O'Connor levied assessments of $38,128,750 against stockholders in 336 closed National banks.

In the year ended October 31, 1933, assessments of $56,900,000 were made against shareholders in 343 closed National banks, a total of nearly $100,000,000 for these two periods. More than $100,000,000 additional is believed sought by State authorities from shareholders of closed non-National banks.

State and National bank officials, however, are usually lucky to collect as much as half of the assessments made because of difficulty in enforcing collection and because many bank stockholders are wiped out when their bank fails.

Less Than Half Paid.

Far less than half of the assessments against stockholders in closed National banks have actually been collected by receivers since the National banking system was established in 1865, according to figures supplied by O'Connor.

Between 1865 and 1933 shareholders of closed National banks have been assessed $245,613,325, of which only $90,784,540 had been collected up to the end of last year.

The latest step by the Federal Government toward cleaning up closed banks was taken here over the week-end when assessments aggregating $3,340,000 were made against shareholders of five Washington, D. C., banks.

Stockholders of several hundred additional banks in various sections are expected to be assessed double liability in the near future, which will virtually clean up the situation so far as National banks are concerned. No National bank has failed since January 1, when the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation began operations.

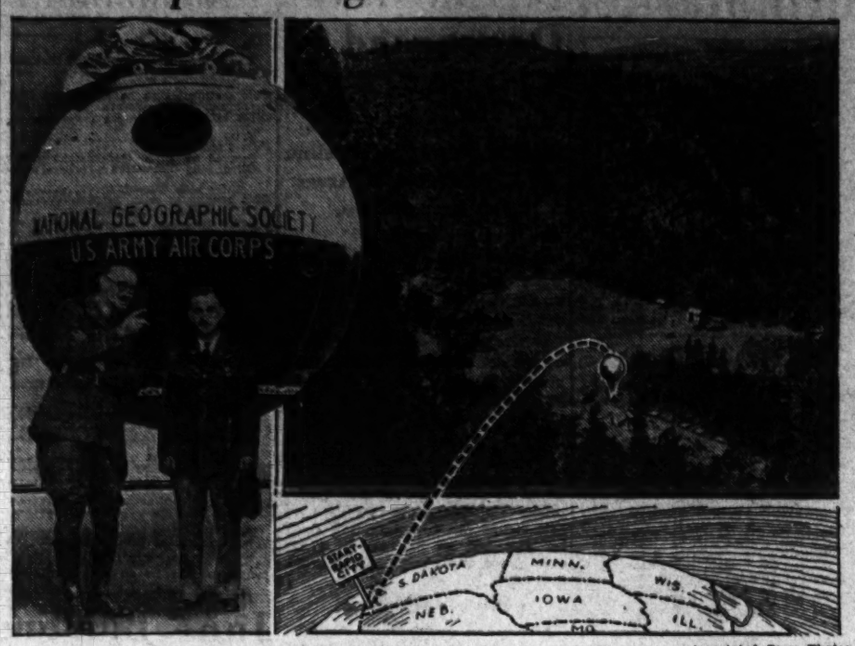
Stratosphere Flight Awaits Good Weather



Associated Press Photos.

Los Angeles, July 7 (U.P.).—Hugo Ballin, Los Angeles artist, is still chuckling over the hoax he perpetrated at the expense of a noted New York critic and the National Academy of Design, of which he is an associate.

By the simple expedient of submitting a picture under an alias at the spring exhibit of the Academy in New York, Ballin won high praise from the unwitting critic who condemned a second picture the artist submitted under his real name. The story is belatedly told by Ballin after he failed to have the Academy publish the story.

Ballin has felt little kindness toward Edward Alden Jewell since the latter in a critical article on American muralists last year implied that he could make no claims in the top ranks. The criticism rankled and Ballin vowed vengeance. With brush and canvas he set to work painting an ugly old woman peering over the top of her spectacles in a maudlin day-dream of love. In her hand was a magazine copy of "Romantic Love Secrets." Ballin named his subject unromantically, "Mrs. Katz, of Venice, Calif.," and signed it "A Gamio."

Up From a County Fair.

The painting was entered in the Los Angeles County Fair art exhibition and duly accepted as an entry in the National Academy's exhibit in New York by the jury. Ballin also sent as his own entry, but of course under separate cover, his portrait of Dolores Del Rio, motion picture actress. As an associate of the Academy, Ballin was entitled to enter this picture without jury inspection.

Reviewing the exhibit in his newspaper, Jewell accorded "Mrs. Katz" the signal honor of being the only figure picture of the exhibit printed. He praised the painting as one of the few of the 363 accepted works which "contributed to progress" and which "deserves a more distinguished position than that afforded by its obscure and lofty corner."

Of Ballin's "Dolores Del Rio," the critic remarked caustically that such "vulgarities had best be forgotten as quickly as possible."

Ballin smiled gleefully as he seized a scrap of cheap writing paper and in illiterate script scrawled the following note to Jewell:

"Dear Sir: I was much pleased when friends they told me of my painting Mrs. Katz of Venice, Calif., and that they used picture in Sunday paper and that great critic say he like my work. My friend, Mr. Ballin, he told me to send and now I am very glad and much joy it bring my mama for Easter and me. Perhaps when you are not too busy you write me what I should paint next more like Mrs. Katz of Venice or inside home life.

"I thank you very much. Truly always, ANTONIO GAMIO."

Still chuckling, Ballin exhibits the following reply from the critic:

"I was delighted to receive your letter. The 'Mrs. Katz' is delightful. I shall look forward to encountering further work from your brush and take this occasion to wish you continued success." The letter was signed "Edward Alden Jewell, art editor."

Ballin says he sent the letters to the Academy with a request that they be published as a joke on the critic. His request was denied.

Fish That Didn't Get Away.

Boise, Idaho, (U.P.).—They can talk of the "big one that got away," but A. C. Tillotson just says, "look." He recently caught 12 fish in Williams Lake. Each measured between 15 and 19 inches and weighed on an average of three pounds.

Elks' Leader Travels Far

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—Walter F. Meier, the headman of Elkdom, has established a mark for commercial travelers to shoot at despite his amateur standing.

He spent from three to eight days in every State in the Union and paid official visits to lodges in Alaska, Hawaii, the Panama Canal Zone and Puerto Rico.

Some 8,500 miles were covered by air, 6,500 by water and the remainder by motor car.

The chief Elk appears anything but the professional "glad-hander" one might expect to find in such a position. He is quiet, incisive and with an eye to details.

He is a native Nebraskan, who left to practice law in Seattle soon after his graduation from the State university in 1903. A special talent for organizing earned him his present honor. Since he started on his roving career he has spent but 20 days at his law practice.

Man Loses Wife Over Love for Family Cat

Oakland, Calif. (U.P.).—Mrs. Gertrude Westfall had an interlocutory divorce decree recently because her husband allegedly preferred the company of the family cat to hers.

"At night," she complained to Superior Judge Lincoln S. Church, "he would pick up the cat, go to his room and slam the door."

Walt Mason, Himself

Dethroned.

It is a ghastly, mournful thing when some world-famed financial king is so reduced he can not buy a doughnut or a custard pie, when he must borrow, in despair, a nickel here, a quarter there, and take the blacking from the shelf, and shine his cowhide shoes himself. When first we see the king dethroned, and think of all the wealth he owned, the wealth he gained by snare and guile, we view his troubles with a smile. We see him struggling in the wreck, with countless cleavers at his neck, we watch him calmly as he squirms, and we remark, in bitter terms, "We do not pity while he sweats, for he deserves whate'er he gets." But soon our indignation wanes; we watch the ex-king while he strains to borrow seven bucks or ten from earnest and hard-working men who once looked cheap as dirt to him, when he was roosting on his limb; we see him hunting bond and bail that he may dodge the joyless jail; we see him on such errands bent, a poor old haggard, stricken gent; his cheap pan-handling makes men tired—he once was honored and admired, and now he would not bring much kale if offered at a rummage sale, and, notwithstanding recent hate, we have to pity such a skate.

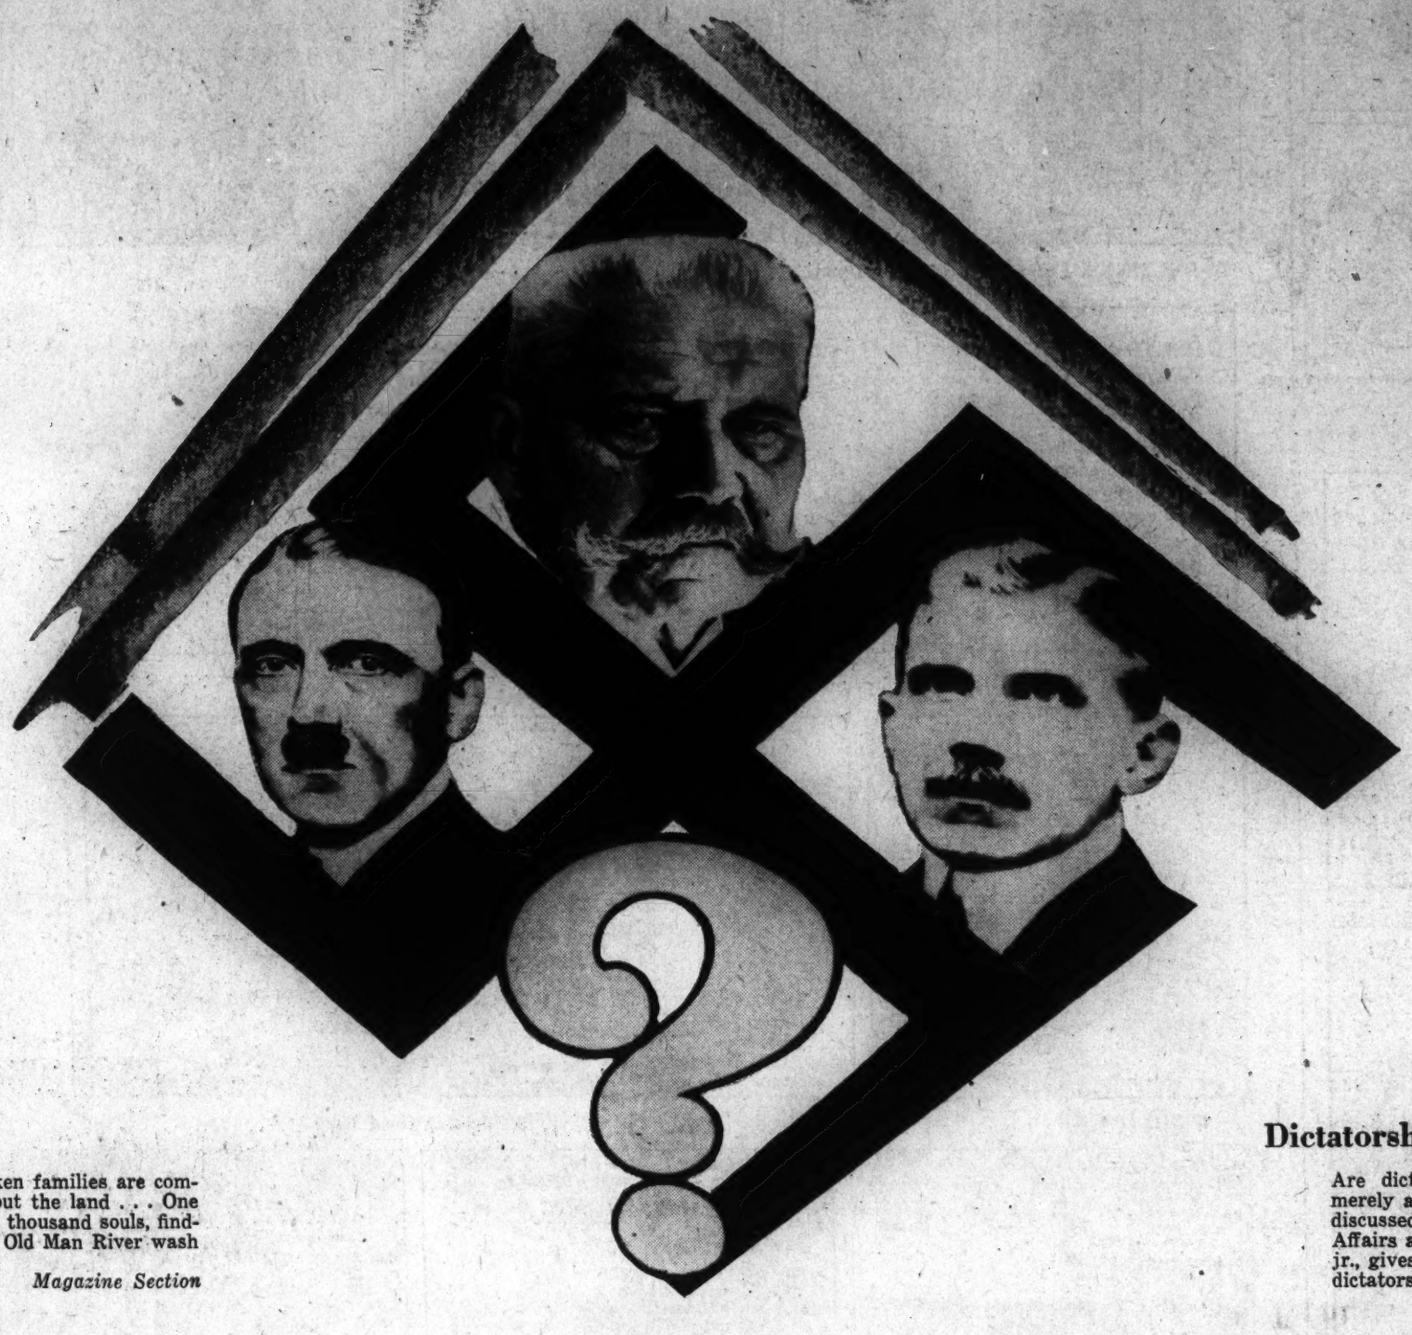
THE SWASTIKA SWAYS—WILL IT FALL?



What lies ahead for Nazi Germany?

The recent cataclysm of revolution and revenge left it badly shaken. Its Storm Troopers are disbanded. Many of its leaders are slain. Will Hitler prevail? Or will the still beloved Von Hindenburg attempt a return of the Hapsburg monarchy?

Soft-voiced and elegant, Franz von Papen was a bomb plotter and a spy during the war. Unequaled as a fighter and a schemer, although he precipitated the recent slaughter, he managed to save his own scalp. Does Hitler fear him? Is he Germany's "white hope?"

Or is there a "dark horse" chieftain . . . a new leader in Germany . . . soon to come to the fore?

In an intensely interesting article, Robert Cruise McManus analyzes the present trend of events in troubled Naziland. Read it in tomorrow's Magazine Section

Smoke on the Eastern Horizon?

Unless we hanker for a long, bloody and expensive war on our hands, we had best change our policy toward the Far East, is the opinion of W.
